SILVER STABILISATION ACCORD REVELATION

AIR DASH TO CABINET MEETING

IMPORTANT WAR DEBT DEVELOPMENT

SIR JOHN SIMON RECALLED

London, June 11.

Sir John Simon, the Foreign Minister, who was taking a week-end holiday at Le Touquet and who was not due to return to England until to-morrow, was urgently summoned this afternoon and travelled immediately by special plane.

Sir John was needed in London for a suddenly called meeting of the war debts committee of the Cabinet, at which Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Mr. Neville Chamberlain and Mr. Walter Runciman were present.

The meeting lasted for well over an hour, and although no inkling has been given of the reason for the sudden conference, the circumstances are held to denote developments in the war debt discussions with Washington.

WASHINGTON CONFIRMS

A message from Washington seems to confirm the week-end reports that the British Cabinet has tentatively offered the United States a token payment of £2,000,000 on account of the June instalment of the war debt.

The Washington message says that President Roosevelt's assistants and advisers are now studying the legality of any part payment of war debts and whether the acceptance of a part payment would constitute tacit approval of the non-payment of the balance.

LAUSANNE INFLUENCE

The issue is also the subject of comment in the American newspapers. The Baltimore Sun, for instance, believes that any ten per cent. offer might create political complications since it would seem to be based upon the Lausanne Pact.

The London Morning Post declared on Saturday that if the British offer was refused, the British Government would probably make use of the right accorded by Congress to make the June payment in silver which would mean that the full instalment would be met at a cost of only £12,000,000 instead of £19,000,000.

The Government would probably make use of the Indian Government's surplus silver for the purpose.

STOP PRESS

Vienna, June 12.

An attempt was made at midnight to assassinate Dr. Rintelen, the local governor of Styria, an ex-Minister of Education, who was motoring from Bruck an der Mur to Graz.

The car ran over a plank covering a hole in the road.

A terrific explosion followed, but the speed of the car carried it out of danger.—Reuter.

CIVIL WAR PERIL IN IRELAND

FORMATION OF RED ARMY

GUN-RUNNING ON CORK COAST

SPLIT IN I.R.A.

London, June 12.

A grave threat of civil war in the Irish Free State is envisaged by the Dublin correspondent of the London Morning Post.

It is stated that as a sequel to the Roman Catholic hierarchy's denunciations of Communism, there has been a split in the headquarters of the Irish Republican Army, some of the most prominent leaders of which have broken away in the hope of being able to form a Red Army.

The Red Army will, it is stated, act under the inspiration of the newly-formed Irish Communist Party.

The situation has been greatly complicated by extensive gun-running on the South Coast of Ireland.

MILITARY ACTIVITY

It is reported that large cargoes of arms and ammunition were landed along the coast of Cork County last week. The origin of these supplies is believed to be Soviet Russia.

There is great military activity at Cork and at Waterford.

Irish Free State aeroplanes are patrolling the coast watching for gun-running vessels.—Reuter.

U.S. JOURNALIST KILLED

CAR SKIDS OVER EMBANKMENT

Vienna, June 7.

An American journalist, Mr. Hooper Trask, was instantly killed and his wife gravely injured when a car in which they were touring the Dolomites, skidded on a mountain road near Vigo de Fassa and plunged down a fifty-foot embankment. Mr. Hooper Trask was Berlin representative of the Columbia Broadcasting Corporation as well as of various American theatrical periodicals.—Trans-Ocean Kyg Min.

BRILLIANT FLIGHT

SEVILLE TO CUBA IN 36 HOURS

DISTANCE RECORD NOT BROKEN

Havana, June 11.

The two Spanish airmen, Captain Barbaran and Lieutenant Collar, who left Seville at 4.55 a.m. yesterday in an attempt to beat the British long-distance flight record, failed in their objective.

They were, however, responsible for a wonderful east to west flight across the Atlantic.

They landed at Camaguey, in Cuba, four thousand miles from Seville after flying that huge expanse of the Atlantic in less than thirty-six hours.

They were flying a biplane, and were carrying petrol sufficient to last them for 48 hours, but they were obliged to battle against stiff headwinds for the great part of the journey and in the circumstances, their Atlantic flight was a brilliant performance.—Reuter.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY IN SWITZERLAND

Seven Electrocuted and Two Injured

Berne, June 6.

Seven persons were electrocuted to-day in the Lavantina valley, in the cantonment of Ticino, while two others were seriously injured. They were lowering logs down the side of a hill by means of a cable when the latter came into contact with a high tension line.—Reuter.

Berlin, June 7.

One person was killed and 47 injured, some seriously, when a motor-bus conveying the members of a Nationalist youth organisation fell into a ravine while crossing a bridge near Ohlau, Silesia. The cause of the accident is not yet known.

TO LOOM LARGE IN LONDON

DELEGATES POUR IN FOR THE CONFERENCE

The World Economic Conference, most important international gathering since the Versailles Peace Conference, will be opened in London to-day by his Majesty the King.

Delegates from sixty-six nations have been pouring into London during the week-end and the stage is now practically set.

The main tasks before the gathering, as foreshadowed by the preliminary Washington conversations, are a removal of trade barriers, exchange restrictions, quota systems, and tariffs, agreements for a common monetary policy, including more liberal credit and lower rates of interest on long-term investment, and the creation of a demand for credit by increased public expenditure.

EUROPEAN STATESMEN ARRIVE

London, June 11.

The officials of six Embassies were among the throngs which awaited a single train arriving at Victoria to-night, bringing, M. Daladier, the French Premier, together with the French delegation, the delegates from Italy, Czechoslovakia (with Dr. Benes at its head), Roumania, Portugal and Yugoslavia.

The train's arrival wound up a day of almost continual arrival of foreign delegates.

Turkey's chief delegate is the Foreign Minister, Tewfik Rushdi Bey.—Reuter.

SILVER RESERVES

American delegates to the World Economic Conference have revealed that President Roosevelt reached an informal accord with some of the foreign statesmen who recently visited the White House with respect to the use of silver in central bank reserves.

This informal and as yet unbinding accord will be presented for discussion at the World Economic Conference and Senator Key Pittman said he hoped that one of the results of the understanding, if officially adopted, would be a world ratio of silver to gold. The present understanding does not attempt to fix a ratio.

The object of this understanding is to economise the use of gold, and under its provisions, the United States would back its money issues with 25 per cent. of gold and five per cent. silver. Other nations would adopt similar provisions with whatever slight variations would be required.

BANKS AND MARKETS

The central banks of the various nations would, under the plan mentioned above, be able to stabilise the price of silver. There would still be a varying market price for silver but it would be kept within definite limits by the operations of the silver banks. When silver prices are low, the banks will buy to keep the silver reserves at an actual five per cent. of their gold value in relation to the nation's money issues. When silver prices are too high, the central banks will sell. All operations will tend to prevent a wide variation.

This arrangement would provide a great use of silver and would result in a better price. Senator Pittman said that it would probably bring about a silver price that would make silver mining profitable. He was not sure, however, that a ratio would be adopted.

A FAIR LEVEL

"The plan is first to stabilise silver and bring the price up to a fair level," Senator Pittman said. "It can see the possibility of an agreement on a world ratio, but that is not assured yet."

money issued varied. The Federal Reserve Bank was required to keep a gold reserve of forty per cent. of its Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation. Gold certificates were backed dollar for dollar by gold but National Bank notes had in

Mr. Neville Chamberlain and Mr. Walter Runciman, upon whom the brunt of the work of the British delegation will fall.

The Treasury only five per cent. of lawful money behind them for final redemption. The redemption fund, however, was maintained constantly at the required level. United States notes, of which about $255,000,000 were in circulation, were backed by reserves of $156,000,000.

NOT ADOPTED

The delegates did not go into details of the effect of the proposed plan on the monetary system of the United States but it was indicated that there would be fewer kinds of money.

The delegates did not go into details of the effect of the proposed plan on the monetary system of the United States but it was indicated that there would be fewer kinds of money.

MODIFIED GOLD BASIS

Basle, June 6.
If the World Economic Conference at London requests the opinion of the Bank of International Settlements regarding currency stabilisation, the Bank's Council will recommend a system based on a modified gold standard but not on the same standard that prevailed until several leading nations were forced to abandon it, authoritative circles believe.

The Council last week decided not to submit a plan for currency stabilisation at the Conference but, if the Conference leaders make the request, the Bank will send representatives to London to discuss the matter.

It is asserted that the heads of the Bank of International Settlements are convinced that the failure of gold to meet the demands made upon it, resulted from lack of regulation. They are said to agree entirely with the statement of Mr. Gustav Meißner, who has just returned from the presidency of the Bank, that no good can come from returning to the gold stand-

During his visit to Chequers to-day, Mr. T. V. Soong, China's Finance Minister, had a long and cordial conversation with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald concerning Anglo-Chinese relations and conditions in the Far East.

Mr. Soong to-night dined with Lord Astor.—Reuter.

AIR CRASH AT LISBON

PRESIDENT HAS A CLOSE SHAVE

PLANE WRECKED TEN YARDS AWAY

Lisbon, June 11.

President Carmona had a very narrow escape from death to-day when an aeroplane crashed no more than ten yards away from where he was standing.

The Portuguese leader, together with members of the Government and of the Diplomatic Corps, were watching a stunt flying competition at the time of the mishap.

One of the machines, carrying out a series of daring loops close to the ground, got out of control owing to the strength of the wind, which was blowing in heavy gusts.

The machine suddenly nose-dived and crashed ten yards from President Carmona.

There was a general panic among the spectators, but President Carmona was quite calm and only remarked: "Please God he is safe!"

The pilot was severely injured.—Reuter.

Missionaries Die From Typhoid

STORY OF FINE HEROISM

Shanghai, June 12.

Mission circles in Shanghai have received news of two heroic British missionaries, the Rev. P. C. Mather and Doctor E. Fischbacher, of the China Inland Mission, who died at Tihwa, in Sinkiang province, from typhoid.

Mr. Mather passed away on May 24 and Dr. Fischbacher died three days later after they had been engaged in organising a hospital to fight the disease.

The two missionaries had just successfully passed through the siege of Tihwa.—Reuter.

and unless its defects are remedied.

SHORT-SIGHTED INDIVIDUALISM

Mr. McGarragh upon his retirement last month, said that the short-sighted individualism which was applied to the standard amounted to "unregulated anarchy."

It was understood that the Bank's Council prepared a plan for submission to the London meeting but later decided that since many of the features would be offered in other programmes, the plan would not be offered as a rounded plan. The Bank's officials, therefore, will go to London to discuss the monetary proposals.

BROWN TERROR IN MUNICH

SMASH CATHOLIC CONGRESS

POLICE FUTILE

STREET ATTACKS ON DELEGATES

Munich, June 11.
Shocking scenes of violence were witnessed in Munich to-day when the Brown Terror swept down upon the Catholic Congress of Apprentices and Journeymen.

The Congress was completely broken up by the violence of the Nazis, and thousands of the delegates, including the Vice-Chancellor of the Reich, Captain von Papen, hastily left Munich.

It is alleged that the disorders were the result of the objection of the Nazis to the wearing of uniforms by the delegates.

DELEGATE KILLED

The Nazis attacked the delegates viciously in the streets and dragged others from their beds.

One delegate died after being cruelly beaten up outside the Cathedral.

Attempts by the police to intervene were futile against the organised Brown Shirts' onslaughts, which were even directed against Catholic priests.

The Nazis prevented the Archbishop of Munich from holding a Mass for the delegates.—Reuter.

JEWISH COMPLAINT UPHELD

Geneva, June 6.

The complaint lodged by the German Jew, Herr Bernheim, against the validity of the anti-Jewish edicts in German Upper Silesia has finally been settled, the Council of the League of Nations adopting the report of Mr. Lester (Ireland). The German and Italian representatives, abstained from voting. The report points out that some of the edicts are incompatible with the statutes regulating the international status of minorities and can, therefore, not be applied. The German Government has voluntarily admitted its responsibility for any damages in the case of injured persons and all resulting claims will be settled through local proceedings.

U.S. AND GERMAN JEWS

Washington, June 6.

Although it has not lodged an official protest, the United States Government has informed the German Government of the "unrest" occasioned in the United States by the anti-Jewish tactics of the Nazis.—Reuter.

STATUE TO GERMAN SLAIN BY FRENCH

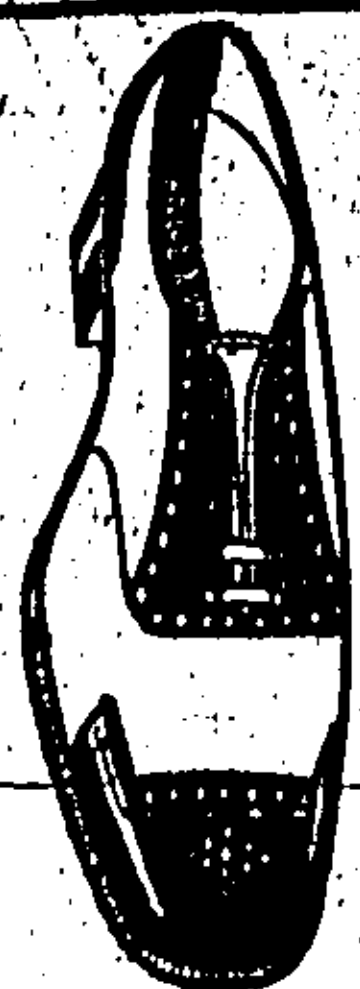

KAISER'S SON AT MEMORIAL TO SCHLAGETER

Berlin, June 6.

An address by the Nazi prince August Wilhelm was the feature to-day of the latest memorial celebration in honour of Schlageter, whom the French shot for sabotage during the Ruhr occupation.

Speaking at Schlageter's native town of Hamm, Westphalia, the Prince declared: "Just as the spot on which Schlageter grasped out his life will become a monument to the German people, so his home town will become a place of pilgrimage for all nationally-minded men and women."

The ceremony closed with an impressive parade of about 10,000 Storm troops and Steel Helmets before the Prince and the Premier of Baden.—Reuter.

MAKE-UP ART

Beauty Aids for the Brunette

The medium brunette will find natural powder for daytime use, one of the many shades of peach or apricot for evening, together with one of the new orange rouges, which change when applied to the skin and take on the tint most becoming to the wearer, ideal for their type.

This dark brunette, however, has a wider range to choose from. She may experiment with both the dark and bright orange shades of rouge as well as the medium reds and the now raspberry tints. She will find that medium rachel, dark rachel, and dark peach shades of powder are best for her.

Lipstick, of course, should match the rouge, but many brunettes will find that they do not need rouge for daytime use at all, and in that case they can choose a bright lipstick, the brighter the better. This is especially suitable if you are a brunette with a true olive complexion.

Rose-Tinted Vanishing Cream

If you are a medium brunette with a disappointing sallow skin, try the effect of using a rose-tinted, vanishing cream. You can buy this from your chemist or make it for yourself at home by mixing a little liquid rouge with an ordinary white vanishing cream. Add about six drops of liquid rouge to half an ounce of cream, and stir well together until the colour is well blended.

Test the colour by massaging a bit of the cream into the cheeks. If it gives a becoming pink tint to the skin do not add any more rouge, but if the skin still appears to have a sallow tint, then stir a few more drops of your liquid rouge into the cream until you have got it to the proper shade.

This cream will probably become streaky after it has been allowed to stand in the jar for a few days, but if you stir it up again, the streaks will disappear.

It should be applied in the same way as ordinary vanishing cream, after cleansing the skin with cold cream and applying astringent.

For Dark Eyes

Eye make-up for the brunette is an important matter. She will find that a trace of eye-shadow on the upper lid will make a tremendous improvement in the appearance of her eyes. The brunette with grey or blue eyes should use blue eye-shadow and purple shadow if her eyes are very dark.

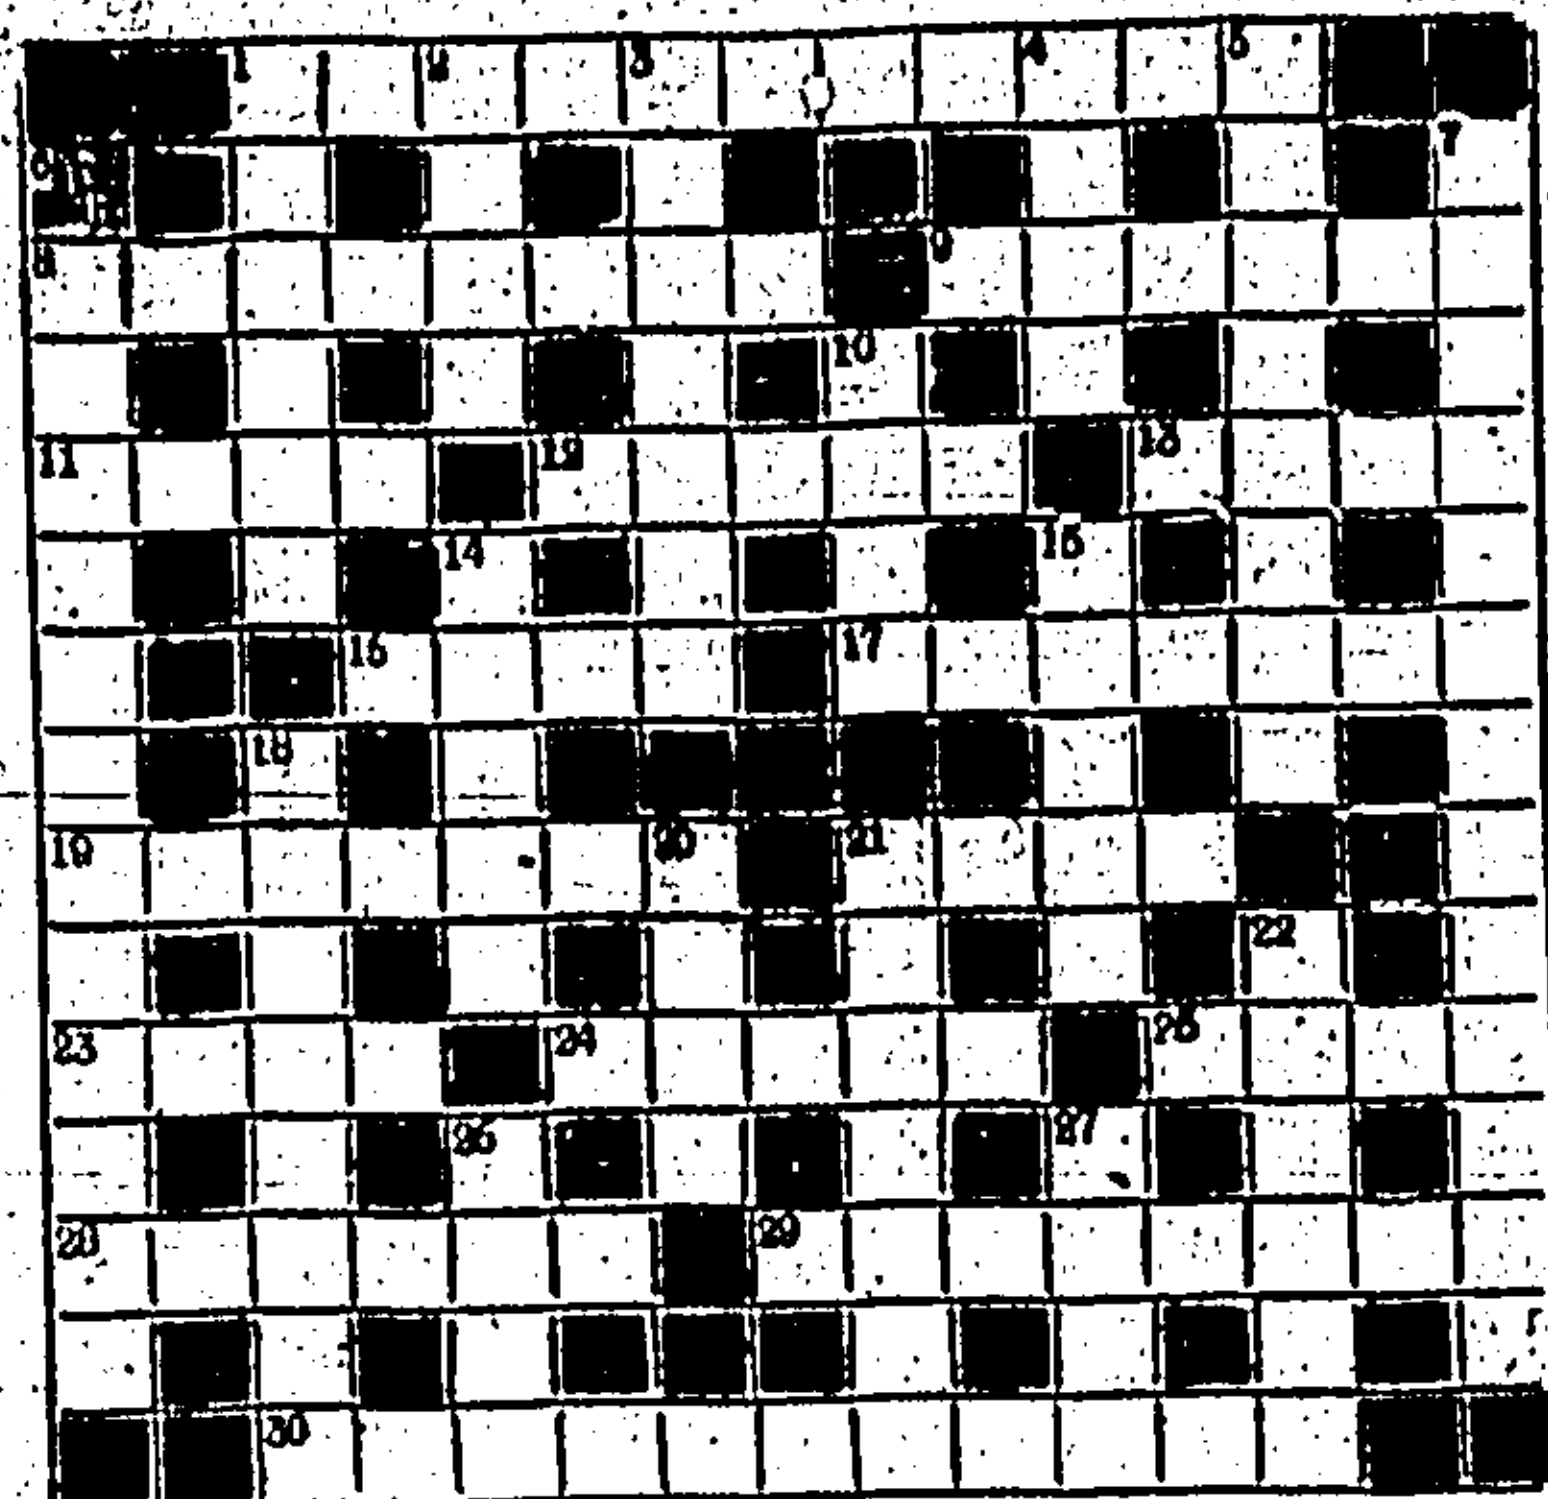

Another make-up tip which is useful to the brunette is to add a thin line of rouge just under the eyebrows when making up for evening. This emphasises the lashes and gives sparkle to the eyes.

Dark, lustrous eyelashes enhance the beauty of dark eyes a thousandfold, and many a brunette loses beauty because she does not pay sufficient attention to her eyes.

Remember that brushing is just as good for your eyelashes as for your hair, and regular brushing night and morning will help to make your lashes long and curly. You can buy little eyelash brushes for a few pence from most of the beauty shops nowadays.

If you want to make your eyelashes grow, brush them with olive oil. This will not only strengthen the growth but it will help to darken the lashes.

EGG TIMBALE

This makes a delicious luncheon or supper dish. Hard-boil 3 eggs and cook 1½ lb. potatoes. Mash the potatoes and add them to 1 oz. butter, melted in a saucepan. Beat till smooth, then turn out on a floured board and roll out. Form into a ring on a flat fireproof dish, brush over with egg, and bake in a moderate oven till brown. Shell the eggs and cut each in four. Make a white sauce with 2 ozs. butter, 2 ozs. flour, and 2 break-fastcupfuls milk. Add the eggs to the sauce, heat thoroughly, and pour into the potato ring. Garnish with chopped parsley and serve at once.

Potato Surprises

Thoroughly scrub 4 large well-shaped potatoes, prick them over, and bake in a moderate oven till soft, probably about 1 hour. Cut a slice off the top of each potato, and scoop out most of the centre, leaving only a potato shell. Carefully break an egg into each case. Melt 1 oz. butter in a saucepan, mash the potato that was removed from the cases, mix thoroughly with the butter, and force in a border of roses round each case. Bake in a moderate oven for 10 minutes, or until the egg sets, then sprinkle with grated cheese and brown quickly.

Highland Eggs

Hard-boil 2 eggs and boil 1 lb. potatoes till soft. Mash the potatoes and beat with 1 oz melted butter, and salt and pepper to taste.

Shell the eggs and coat them thickly with the potato, then brush

PRACTICAL RECIPES

Kidney Soup

Wash an ox-kidney, and put it into a pan with 1 pint of water, and parboil it for about ten minutes.

Pour away the water, which is useless, cut the kidney into small pieces, and boil slowly in a quart of stock for two hours.

The stock can be made from a good broth bone. In the meantime make the thickening in this way:—Mix together 1 tablespoonful of cornflour, 2 tablespoonfuls of flour, a seasoning of ketchup, a little brownng, a little salt and pepper, and ½ pint of water.

Stir this into the soup, and continue stirring until it boils up again, and is thick.

Tomato Toast

Half a pound tomatoes, ½ ounce margarine, 1 egg, 1 medium-sized onion, salt and pepper. Peel the tomatoes, and slice them. Fry the chopped onion in the margarine till soft, but not browned.

Mix tomatoes and onion and seasoning, and simmer in the pan in which the onion was fried, cooking slowly for about fifteen minutes.

Remove from the direct heat, and stir in the beaten egg, letting this thicken the mixture, without boiling, then serve on strips of toast.

with beaten egg and roll in bread-crumbs. Repeat the eggng and crumbing to prevent the potato bursting during the frying process, then fry for 5 minutes in deep fat.

Drain well, cut each in two, and arrange on a hot plate with some good white sauce poured round.

DARLING FOOL

MCLELLITT

CHAPTER IV

The days dragged on. Monnie had not dreamed there could be pain like this. To know Dan was in the same town and not to see him was sheer torture. May proved to be a month drenched in sweetness. Lilac scent filled the air, forsythia blazed in every doorway, the nights were moonlit, soft and still.

Still no Dan. She did not even see him at the wheel of the roadster, skimming along the roads. At home the family forbore to ask questions. Kay was caught up in a whirl of high school activities. Bill came and went, ate his meals moodily, and slipped back to the garage. Monnie came out of her own daze of misery to realize there was something definitely wrong in Bill's sphere. He was more silent, more dour than usual. Poor Bill—it was having to work too hard and too early that had weighed him down so that, at 22, he seemed years older.

And their mother—Monnie had twinges of worry about her, too. She seemed cheerful as always, but her step was slower. She sighed deeply and quietly when she thought no one was about. All the O'Dares seemed to be drifting. What was it all about? Why did other people have good times, bright, happy homes while the young O'Dares must carry this heavy burden?

At this point in her reflections Monnie always shook herself vigorously. "This is nonsense," she would remind herself. "Aren't I all well and strong? Haven't I a job and a roof over my head—and good friends?"

She was arguing with herself thus one day, hurrying home for lunch, when she ran straight into the arms of a tall man.

"I—oh, I beg your pardon!" All scarlet lips, flashing amber eyes, she stared up at him.

"Quite all right," Charles Eustace's deep voice reassured her. "I wasn't on the right side of the road, either."

They laughed together and Monnie's heart lightened. It was good to laugh with someone. She hadn't for days.

"Mind if I turn about and go your way?" Eustace wanted to know. "I'm just barging about for exercise."

How tall he was and, yes—how distinguished looking! It was odd she didn't think him better looking than Dan—but she didn't. He was nice. Another girl, fancy free, might have found him much more than that but at the moment Monnie's heart was wholly engaged. She was insulated against the charms of every man in the world except Dan Cardigan.

"I've been wondering why I didn't see you around town," Eustace began, suiting his long step to hers.

Monnie smiled. "I've been here. All this time."

She could catch the scent of good leather and Virginia tobacco as he opened a pouch and stuffed his pipe. She stopped to watch him do it. Funny—she liked a man to smoke a pipe. Dan always smoked cigarettes. One after the other. Nervously. She shook herself. What a fool she was—always harking back to Dan!

The man glanced down at her shrewdly. "You are looking rather pale," he observed. "Are they working you too hard?"

Monnie shook her head. "It's—spring—I guess. Maybe I need a change."

"This is a grand town to see spring in," said Charles Eustace. "This time last year—"

He stopped abruptly. Monnie looked up at him innocently to discover he was very white. She had a sensation of keen distress.

"Never mind," he finished briefly. "I was in France. It was beautiful there, but this is more peaceful. One can be at home here."

There was, obviously, something too painful for him to speak about. The two walked on in companionable silence.

"I say," he went on after a few moments, "I've been wondering if I couldn't persuade you to come up to my place for dinner one night soon. Perhaps your mother—and that young sister of yours. I'd ask a few other people. We could have a sort of picnic. My boy, Kong, is a wizard at fried chicken."

"That would be lovely," Monnie said. "We'd like to come."

"Would you really?" There was something very boyish in the way he asked that.

"Of course." She could smile at this man, be friendly and gracious with him, because she wasn't in love with him. Oh, how stupid was love! It made you stiff and awkward and unsure of yourself.

"Splendid. How about Thursday next, then?"

She said Thursday would, but she would pick them up. About six-thirty, Monnie felt definite cheer. That was something to look forward to, at any rate. Life had been so dull lately. And mother would love it.

She ran in, full of her adventure. "Mother! Where are you?" "Where's everybody?" Silence greeted her. The kitchen was silent, full of noontime sun, dancing on the cups and saucers. The stove was unlighted. "Mother!"

Monnie ran upstairs, catching her foot for the thousandth time on the stairs.

But there was no one in the shabby front bedroom with the looped white curtains, so carefully darned. Her mother's bed, immaculately white, her dresser neat and tidy, all silently testified to the late occupancy of the owner.

Monnie grew frightened. Perhaps mother had become ill, had fainted in the bathroom! With fast beating heart she turned the knob. But that, too, was silent, empty.

It was not like mother to go off without leaving some word. What on earth could have happened? With a feeling of nervousness, Monnie put the kettle on to boil, measured tea into the cracked blue and white pot and sliced some bread for toast. She had to be back at the store within the hour. These preparations begun, she hurried to the phone. She would call Bill at the garage. He might be able to solve the mystery.

"Hello! May I speak to Bill, please?"

Mr. Harnett's voice, rumbling, intimidating, answered. "Bill? Bill's not here."

Her heart began to race faster. "When will he be back, do you know?"

The voice sounded sardonic now. "Couldn't say, I'm sure."

Desperately Monnie said, "Mr. Harnett, this is Bill's sister—Monica O'Dare. Is anything wrong?"

There was an instant's pause—long enough for Monnie to hear, separately and distinctly, the hissing of the kettle, the ticking of the clock, and the thump-thump-thump of her own unruly heart. Then the man at the other end of the wire said with infinite deliberation: "Wrong enough, miss. There's been some trouble here and Bill's gone along to the station with Officer Garvan." "Trouble?" She almost screamed the word. "What sort of trouble?"

But the wire clicked. The connection was broken. She put the receiver back on the hook and went back to the kitchen. She stared for an instant at the steaming kettle before reaching to turn off the gas. She detached the toaster, noting dully that the two thin slices she had cut were smoldering blackly behind the wires. Then she put on her hat and wandered out into the street. She hadn't the least idea where she was going or what she was to do. Except that Bill was in trouble and her mother, wherever she was, needed her.

The police station. Monnie had never been inside it before, in all her life. In Belvedere, and her heart quailed now at the prospect of entering its door portals. She squared her shoulders and marched in.

There was a big, blue-coated man at the onken desk just inside the door. He lifted an inquiring eyebrow at her.

"Is—Is Officer Garvan in?" "No, ma'am."

She knew most of the policemen in Belvedere by sight but this man was a stranger to her. "I'm Monica O'Dare. Someone—I mean I was told I would find my brother here."

She knew her face was blazing and she could hardly speak above a whisper. "The man jerked his thumb in the direction of a door just behind him. 'You can go in there if you want to see the young foiler."

Somewhat her lagging feet carried her across the room, somehow her fingers turned the knob. She braced herself for the ordeal. Just inside Bill sat, looking dark and angry. Three men were with him, talking and gesticulating. And Monnie's mother, twisting her handkerchief.

At the sight of the latter, Monnie's own terror took wings. What was she here for, if not to bring her mother strength and courage? Whatever had happened, her mother was not to suffer. Monnie made her step firm and her voice cheerful.

"What's happened?" she asked in a clear voice.

The biggest man, the one with the loud voice, turned to stare at her. "Matter enough!" he announced beligerently. "This young man's under arrest. Who are you?"

Singing the Jewish chant for the dead, thousands of Jewish war veterans and other marchers paraded through the streets of New York to protest against the anti-Semitic activities in Germany and demanding that the United States shall sever diplomatic relations with Germany.

M. Sikellianos, an admirer of the drama and poetry of ancient Greece, has formed an organization with the object of reviving and presenting to the modern Greeks the masterpieces of the old. One of these productions took place in a great open air theatre at Philopappos when the play was watched by a crowd of 200,000. Dog Guides for the Blind

ALMOST AS GOOD AS PAIR OF EYES

Trained to Await Gap in Traffic

By means of specially trained dogs the two blessings of complete independence and companionship are being restored to the 62,000 blind people in Great Britain.

This was forcibly brought home by the demonstration of Guide Dogs for the Blind, at the Ladies' Kennel Association Dog Show at Olympia.

The dog is fitted with a harness which the blind man grasps. Accompanied by such a dog, a sightless man can walk as fast along crowded streets as a man with the full use of his eyes.

The dog is trained to obey three commands: Right, Left, Stop. When one of these specially trained dogs comes to an obstruction it stops of its own accord. It also stops at a kerb until its master has felt the position and depth of the kerb, and will not lead its owner across the road until there is a gap in the traffic.

Captain Singleton, chairman of the society which has been formed to train these dogs, appeals to the public not to obstruct the animals to see what they will do, as considerable difficulty has been caused to blind persons by thoughtless behaviour of this sort.

THREE MONTHS' TRAINING. It takes three months for an expert to train a school of eight dogs, after which the blind man has three weeks' instruction in using the dog, which is supplied free of charge.

Pathetic letters of gratitude have been received by the society from men to whom the gift of such a dog has meant freedom to take exercise and in some cases to practise a profession.

At the show there are competitions and parades for every type of dog and puppy, including "toy" dogs.

The most popular corner is the stall which houses the dogs who have won a "V.C." Bob of Carmel has twice saved the life of his owner, once dragging him unconscious from a blazing car, once saving him from falling over a cliff by hanging on to his collar. Moss is the only dog to have won a "V.C." and a bar. He has rescued from drowning a boy who had fallen into the river Tawe, and saved his mistress from the attack of a maddened sow.

Tower Hill Comes to Life Again

BAND PLAYS IN THE MOAT

Tower Hill—where ancient London strolled on sunny days to watch the shipping in the Pool and glimpse the great folk in the Tower—is coming to life again.

Skittles, once the yeomen's favourite pastime in many alleys around the Tower, is played again in Trinitysquare. Houses, long disused as dwellings, are inhabited once more. And in the gardens flanking the moat, crowds now gather to hear popular music played by the British Legion City Band.

By special permission of the Constable of the Tower, and through the generosity of Lord Wakefield, the old bandmen are to play each Tuesday and Thursday during the summer. It is hoped by this means to attract the lunch-hour Londoner to this old meeting and talking place.

On the first day the band played "You Are My Heart's Delight," "The Belle of New York" and selections from "The Gondoliers" to a crowded and appreciative "gallery." The band sat in the moat, its music echoing back with monotonous effect from the gray and black stone walls of the Tower.

LAST LINK IN B.B.C. GRID

WALES ON THE WIRELESS MAP

ANOTHER LANGUAGE PROBLEM

The Seven Years' Plan of the B.B.C. to make Britain supreme among broadcasting nations is just reaching fulfilment with the completion of the West Regional transmitter station.

Within a period of weeks, when the station has gradually come into full working, every part of Britain will offer even the poorest listener in a choice of two programmes.

This wireless "grid" was planned seven years ago. Regional stations arose for London, Scotland and the Midlands. Wales remained, owing to its mountains, practically off the wireless map, and the West Country was neglected. Now, in country as beautiful as the exile's dream of England, their need, too, is satisfied.

A few furlongs north of the twin marts, whose summits sail across the sky 500 feet above the stone-built station and its dynamo, lies the Severn. On the remaining sides are the lovely hills of Exmoor, Brendon, and Quantock.

HILLS CONQUERED.

The choice is due to the hills of Wales, which prevent the stations of Cardiff and Swansea from being heard in most of Wales.

Here, on the Somerset side of the Severn, the B.B.C. have found, after long tests, that the wireless waves are able to gain enough momentum crossing the unrelenting water surface to surmount easily the barrier hills that defy Cardiff and Swansea stations. These will now be closed in consequence.

But the B.B.C. studios there will not be closed; they will telephone across to the West Regional aerials what will be really a Welsh national programme, while the West Country's music and adventures will travel from studios in Bristol and Plymouth.

"Till now," a B.B.C. official said, "the proportion of listeners in Wales has been far below normal, because they had no programmes they could hear, except just round Cardiff and Swansea. Already, however, Welsh people are eagerly buying sets, and soon a novel quandary will have to be settled—the problem of 'standard Welsh'."

"There are three pronunciations of Welsh—north, west, and south. How we shall find a Welsh that has no 'accent' we really do not know, and getting more announcers is going to be difficult."

The British Officers' Training Corps system is to be adopted in Chinese schools, as a first step in the abolition of conscripted service.

The British system was chosen after careful studies were made of military training methods in the United States and several European countries.

"By this means," the military commission has explained, "citizens can receive military training in the schools and afterwards their conscripted service can be so reduced as to lessen the burden on the individual and the State."

Military economies in this year's budget will be made as a result of the new system. It has been announced that the army will be reduced by 132 officers, including six generals.—Reuter.

MORE WOOL 1932 PRODUCTION INCREASE

JAPAN'S BIGGER IMPORTS

London.

The world's wool production is not far below the record level of 1928 and 1929, despite five years of low prices, according to a review of the world wool situation by the Empire Marketing Board. Wool production has fallen off in the United States and Russia recently. In Russia the decline is estimated at 50 per cent of the peak production of nearly 400,000,000 lb. in 1929. Russia is not now an exporter of raw wool. Japan has heavily increased her imports of wool. They exceeded 180,000,000 lb. in 1932, as compared with 72,000,000 lb. in 1926. The increased imports by Japan of Australian wool have absorbed almost the whole increase in Australian production.—Reuter.

Hitler's Family Tree

NAME ORIGINALLY HIEDLER

Vienna. The name of Adolf Hitler, the German Chancellor, was written "Hiedler" until about 1760, according to the newspaper "Waldviertler Botte," which gives some particulars of his family tree.

The family came from Waldviertel in the Waldviertel region of Upper Austria, and can be traced back there to 1672. They then moved to Spital near Gmünd, now on the borders of Czechoslovakia.

Hitler's father learned the trade of shoemaker, but later became a civil servant and rose to be a senior official in the customs.

Adolf was the third child. He has an elder brother and sister and one younger sister.—Reuter.

FLOOD WATERS RISE.

FEARS FOR SAFETY OF THE HANKOW AREA

Nanking, June 11.

The fear of a flood in Hankow area has been expressed in a telegram from the Governor to the Yuan Executive.

HE LOST HIS TEETH—and HER!

Pyorrhea has done its deadly work

ONE tragedy followed another. At first it didn't seem serious. She noticed his bleeding gums and told him not to neglect them, but he did nothing. They became sponge-like and tender. Next the teeth loosened at the very roots! Then one tooth fell out, another had to be pulled out. Now half of them are gone.

Why him? Yes, but he could have avoided it, easily, just as you can avert such a tragedy. Every morning and evening, brush your teeth with Forhan's for the Gums. More than a tooth paste, this scientific dentifrice is prepared to prevent dread pyorrhea. It not only keeps your teeth clean and white, but prevents pyorrhea from attacking your gums, your teeth, and your health.

Forhan's for the Gums is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D.D.S., specialist in mouth diseases. It contains Forhan's Pyorrhea Arresting developed by Dr. Forhan and used by dentists throughout the world in the treatment of pyorrhea.

ROOSEVELT HOPEFUL

WILL NEGOTIATE FOR TARIFF TRUCES IF NECESSARY

Washington, June 10. President Roosevelt is hopeful that a tariff agreement will be reached at the World Economic Conference in London.

Rather than now approach Congress for authority to raise or lower the tariff rates, however, he intends to negotiate after the conference for bi-lateral treaties, which could be submitted to the next session of Congress for ratification.

Meanwhile, the President can raise or lower the tariff rates by fifty per cent. upon the recommendation of the Tariff Commission. —Reuter Special.

U.S. Scepticism

New York, June 11. Scepticism of any great results from the World Economic Conference in London is growing in New York.

Stress is being laid on the difficulty of reconciling the uncertainties of inflation in the United States with a programme entailing a reduction of tariffs or the stabilisation of the dollar at a level acceptable to Great Britain and France.

In this connexion the spectacular rise of sterling during the past week has caused rumours on Wall Street that the United States Government is trying to drive down the gold dollar in order to encourage the export of American commodities and help the farmers, who have been showing renewed restiveness during the past few weeks. —Reuter Special.

Excitement in Europe

London, June 11. There is excitement in London regarding the World Economic Conference, and the hotels are hives of industry, with delegates, experts and pressmen rushing hither and thither.

This excitement is reflected in the other capitals of Europe. Berlin views the conference dolefully, fearing that the divergent views will be a bar to smooth progress.

Similar views are held by conservative circles in Paris; but Rome reflects optimism, and it is stated that Italy's delegates will press for reduced tariffs and a return to the gold standard of the pound and dollar, and the currencies of the sterling area, at as high a rate as possible, as well as abolition of exchange restriction and trade quotas. —Reuter Special.

Chinese Delegation

London, June 10. Members of the Chinese delegation to the World Economic Conference, are busily conferring among themselves.

WAR ON PIRATES

TROOPS AND PLANES TO LAUNCH ATTACK

Changchun, June 11. The Kwantung Army headquarters declare that the recent offer of $50,000 for the release of the British captives from the steamer Nanchang was the final endeavour to effect their rescue by the Provincial authorities.

The case hitherto has been left in the hands of the Manchukuo authorities, but the bandit chief has scornfully refused to reduce the ransom from the sum of a million dollars previously demanded.

After referring the matter to the British Government, the Kwantung Army has now decided on enveloping the pirates by land and sea, and is despatching sufficient troops, who will be guided by aeroplanes, to ensure concluding the affair. —Reuter.

[The British officers from the S. S. Nanchang, who have been in pirate hands for nearly eleven weeks, are Messrs. Clifford Johnson, Hargrave and Blue.]

No Representations.

Nanking, June 9. Official circles here categorically deny that Mr. Ariyoshi, the Japanese Minister to China, who is visiting Nanking in a private capacity, had as yet made any representations in regard to the Chinese tariff changes.

It is emphasised that Japan has no business to interfere with China's exercise of her right in tariff autonomy. —Reuter.

Peking, June 10. Interviewed by the Chinese press concerning reports regarding the attitude of General Yen Hui-shan, General Ho Ying-ching's spokesman declared that as a result of telegraphic communication as well as personal communication with General Hsu Ying-chang, Governor of Shansi who is at present in Peking, General Ho Ying-ching is convinced that General Yen Hui-shan's views regarding the situation in North China coincide with those of Chiang Kai-shek.

The same spokesman revealed that General Yen wired Chiang Kai-shek stating that during these critical times he would always agree to any measure taken for the benefit of the country as a whole. —Reuter.

COLLISION AT SEA.

TWO FISHING JUNKS SUNK BY N.D.L. HOLSTEIN.

When the N.D.L. s.s. Holstein came into port during the week-end she had on board ten Chinese, the crews of two fishing junks which were struck and sunk by the steamer in a collision at sea on Thursday night.

The Holstein was on her way to Europe from Northern ports, and the collision is ascribed by Captain Karl von Methen, master of the Holstein, to the fact that the native craft were carrying no lights.

The two junks were sailing close together and were struck one after the other, and began to sink. Boats were launched from the Holstein, and efficient rescue work resulted in all ten men, comprising the two crews, being taken safely on board.

CUBAN'S EXPERIENCE.

TWICE IN DIFFICULTIES AT REPULSE BAY

The large number of bathes at Repulse Bay on Saturday afternoon were thrown into a state of great excitement by an alarm being given that one of their number had got into difficulties, and was probably drowning.

Mr. Baccadi, reputed to be a wealthy Cuban, who was staying at the Repulse Bay Hotel, was seen to have gone out of his depth, and his struggles attracted the attention of bathers in the vicinity, who came to his rescue. They were successful in bringing him ashore.

Not long afterwards, Mr. Baccadi, who had again ventured into deep water, was once more in danger of drowning. For the second time, he had to be given assistance, on this occasion by Mr. Harris Walker and a number of friends who were fortunately near at hand.

Mr. Baccadi emerged from his close call with remarkably unscathed, and not long afterwards was seen slipping a drink out on the verandah of the Hotel, apparently none the worse for his unpleasant experience.

WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

The atmosphere on the eve of the opening of the World Economic Conference is altogether favourable. A sort of hopeful pessimism rather than of confidence prevails. Nations have been too busy devising bargaining weapons to justify the belief that comprehensive agreements will be easy of achievement, and furthermore, the shadow of the war debts question still hangs over London. Until this has been cleared away, the delegates will be clearly working under a disadvantage, although too much stress need not be placed upon this aspect at this moment. President Roosevelt must declare himself, one way or another, this week, and it is hardly to be supposed that he will jeopardise what prospects of success exist by adamant insistence on full payment of the June instalment. Leaving this on one side, therefore, to examine the agenda for the Conference, we find that it deals both with financial and economic questions in detail. It offers a broad plan for the restoration of prices and the resuscitation of world trade. The official representatives of those governments which participated in the formulation of the programme have commented upon the scope of their plan in the following words: "It will not, in our judgment, be possible to make progress by piecemeal measures. A policy of 'nibbling' will not solve the crisis. We believe that the Governments of the world must make up their minds to a broad solution by concerted action along the whole front. Action in the field of economic relations depends largely upon monetary and financial action and vice versa. Concerted measures in both fields are essential if progress is to be made in either." The official position of those who make this comment lends these forceful words peculiar importance, and also suggests that the outcome may finally depend upon the weight of expert opinion arrayed against political considerations. The agenda gives every indication that the experts who drew it up were fully aware of the present crisis, and were prepared to lay aside nationalistic pride and rivalry with a view to securing world prosperity. If the attitude which characterises the document can possibly be maintained by the Governments themselves, in spite of opposing political considerations, the success of the World Economic Conference is assured.

T. V. Soong

Mr. T. V. Soong has had a wonderful reception in London, where he will be China's chief representative at the World Economic Conference, and where, at the same time, he may do much to cement Anglo-Chinese relations. Mr. Soong has been Finance Minister of Chinese governments, first at Canton and then at Nanking, since 1925, and is regarded as the foremost Chinese financier of his generation. But he has become more than a financial genius in China; he has become the standard bearer of enlightened Chinese progressivism, fighting entrenched feudalism, slowly pushing back the guerrilla military incubus which has grown out of feudalism, and attempting to develop a genuine patriotism and concern for public welfare in a country where the family's interests always have stood above those of the nation. He has steadily enhanced both power and reputation. In China he is regarded generally as the country's outstanding statesman, a skilful diplomat in the realm either of Chinese or of Western politics. A solution of the Chinese "problem" has become distinctly more important to the world at large during the last two years than it has ever been before. Japan has ended by intervention the period during which the outside world had already to wait patiently for China's leaders to restore order from her own chaos, and the outcome of the undeclared Sino-Japanese war is not yet clear. Nor is it clear whether the Chinese and Japanese can settle their quarrel without dragging in other reluctant nations, or whether Chinese factions can agree sufficiently among themselves to make possible an agreement with Japan. Mr. Soong's visit may help to clarify these uncertainties. As a practical financier, he knows that continued friction between China and Japan is bad for business in both countries. As a professional statesman, he understands that settlement of the Sino-Japanese dispute is a matter of world concern. In London, far from the passionate atmosphere naturally aroused by conflict in China, Mr. Soong may be able to talk through with Japanese and disinterested statesmen a formula for settling the dispute which has aroused the entire world's anxiety.

Makers of Music

"Music should be, and ought to be, the greatest of popular arts." You will not find this quoted in any biography of Beethoven. Neither is it included in any obituary of Kreisler, Mary Garden, or Paul Whiteman. The author of "A Defence of Philosophic Doubt" said it. The speaker was Lord Balfour, one time Britain's Prime Minister, at the 1909 Royal National Eisteddfod of Wales on a subject always close to his heart—the democratic nature of music. This interesting sidelight on the diplomatist and deliver into philosophy, narrated entertainingly in the London Musical Opinion, leads the reader to sober reflection on the decline of music "made in the home." Aside from the fact that, in Lord Balfour's early days the concertina enjoyed a certain vogue even in the salons of the elect, can his predilection be lightly laughed at even in this mechanistic age? Moderns whose sole musical accomplishment rests in turning a knob might well pause to ponder if the easily-won entertainment of the radio can ever equal the charm evoked by individual attainments within the family circle. The gramophone and the radio have their rightful place, but to those music lovers who discipline themselves to "make their own music" in the home the world owes more than it commonly suspects.

WORLD CRISIS

III: A UNIQUE SITUATION FROM WHICH THERE IS NO ESCAPE

BY FREDERICK COPE, A.M.I.E.E.

(This is the third of a series of timely articles upon current industrial, monetary and economic problems by a local contributor.)

All that has been said so far is very well for internal trade, but when foreign trade is considered a different set of circumstances appear. A paper instrument is again called into play, termed a bill or draft.

In normal times, Mr. Bull of London, in order to pay for goods in New York pays sterling in London for a dollar draft. For the reverse purposes, Mr. Samuel in New York would pay dollars for a sterling draft on London.

In London the dollar selling is set off against the dollar buying. In New York the sterling selling is set off against the sterling buying. If the trade is equal the draft account would balance.

If the amount of drafts on New York exceeds those on London then the New York Banker is offered more pounds than he wants or can use; consequently, he will only buy the excess sterling at a discount. In normal times, this is one of the causes of the variation in the rate of exchange. If the balance becomes too large gold shipments have to be made.

The Rate of Exchange is the rate which the currency of one country will exchange for that of another. In a condition in which a number of countries are off the gold standard and a few countries are on a silver basis, the rate of exchange is a very variable factor, and one which is very obstructive to trade.

In Hongkong, we are aware that at one period $1 sterling cost $4, and at another it cost $22. In other words, we may say that if a package of tea in Britain is priced in terms of gold $1, the price in Hongkong dollars for the tea has ranged from $4 to $22. This brings us to the price system.

PRICE SYSTEM.

The package of tea has not altered in real value, it is just the same. This enormous discrepancy between the real value and the money value of the article makes present day money appear to be a doubtful measure of value.

A very desirable quality of good money is "Stability of Purchasing Power". We certainly like to feel that the money in our pocket will buy the same article or obtain for us the same service to-day, in next year, or twenty years hence, making allowance for the fall in costs, due to improved productive methods, when it should buy more.

It is evident that the present money system does not possess the virtue of "Stability of Purchasing Power". Whether the value of goods and services can be efficiently measured and expressed in terms of gold or any other metal, leads us to one of the burning questions of the day. It is burning questions to be the crux of the present World Crisis. Gold possesses very little utility value of itself. There is no close relationship between gold and goods and services. It is therefore argued that gold money cannot provide a good price system. But that is another question.

The present monetary system is certainly an unreliable instrument. It is delicately poised and soon thrown out of gear. To make matters worse, the war debts and reparations of the Great War were unduly loaded on to the system which previously was scarcely strong enough to deal with the rapid expansion of Commerce and Industry. It almost looks now as if the last straw has been placed upon the camel's back.

This is patent to-day when there are not more than three or four countries out of sixty on the real gold standard, and economic chaos is the rule.

PHYSICAL WEALTH.

We will now turn to this aspect of the economic question—the aspect of Physical Wealth. What has happened in this field? Let us make a fundamental examination of this question. For the purpose of this article, in the first place, we will define Physical Wealth as the result of Material plus Energy. Every commodity possesses these components.

Muscular energy was employed before the Machine Age. A man tilled the soil with his own energy, with the assistance of the energy of horses or oxen. Material plus Energy resulted in Crops. These were reaped and transported by energy for ultimate use. Our houses, roads, motor-cars are all the products of material and energy in some form.

From the early times up to the time of the invention of machinery, production of goods steadily increased and man gradually became wealthier. From the time of Watt's Steam Engine, when mechanical energy began to be substituted for muscular energy, the rate of progress was quickened and over the last twenty years the rate of progress has been phenomenal, so much so that it has outrun our ability to utilise and take advantage of it.

We have now arrived at the paradoxical or insane stage of having produced a large supply of almost every conceivable commodity, and the only purpose our imagination can find for it is destruction.

Commodities which at one time required a large amount of human effort are now mostly produced by mechanical energy.

The startling fact of the day is that we are increasing production and decreasing labour at the same time. The longer we go, the more emphasised this will become, until only a fraction of human labour will be required. To those who have embraced the idea as to justify himself, Man, in order to justify himself, must give a considerable amount of time each day to the production of physical wealth, the position must present a serious state of affairs. The facility of production, the ponderance of goods, the shifting of the burden of work from Man to machine, are phases or fat sorrows, by which, in the future, we shall be relentlessly pursued.

TECHNOCRACY.

It is not possible in this article to refer to the innumerable facts and indications, but amongst others we will take one or two quoted in a recent article by Howard Scott.

An artificial silk mill will soon be in operation in the United States, displacing with all labour, except one man on a switchboard.

In such a stable industry as flour milling, during the last 30 years, three out of every four Mills have closed down. One out of every five persons has been released. The hours of the remainder have been reduced, and yet a twenty per cent. increase of production has occurred. In the steel industry, during the same period, labour decreased from 70 man-hours per ton to 13 man-hours per ton; in other words, to obtain the same production to-day 87 Man out of every 70 Men are released.

In the motor car industry, labour has decreased from 1,201 Man-hours per vehicle to 92, and within a short space of ten years from 313 Man-hours to 92 Man-hours. The rate of progress was such that 212 men-out of every 313 employed are now released, and the same work accomplished. In 1929, four million more motor cars were made. With 85 million less Man-hours than were used in 1919.

The Very Idea!

A DOCTOR WHO TELLS

By Eddie Kelly, Quack.

SALLOW faced and flat chested, we stand forth as the representative of those people who cannot, and don't want to be healthy.

Doctors may be alright in their places, such as curing chilblains and amassing large fortunes for themselves, but let them leave us alone.

We are proud of our ill-health. Every time we cough, people whisper about our chest, and sympathise with us. Why should we be foully done out of a complaint we have had for years?

Take dentists, too. They've often got a nerve the way they want to fool around with drills, and pyrophen and other dental terms.

Doctors and dentists are too eager with their needles and things. Things were different when we were a doctor. We would have still been one, only the B.M.A. found us out.

You've all heard of the "Diary of a Doctor who Tells". Well, we're going to give you the "Diary of a Doctor Who Doesn't Tell—Because He Can't".

Difference between us and a lot of other doctors is that we're game to admit it.

MONDAY, June 6. Called on Mrs. Brown this morning. Told her all about our lumbago; how it affects our arms and legs and keeps us awake at night with the pain. She advised us to suck a raw lemon and drink plenty of gin every morning.

Wonder if there is anything in these grandmother remedies? TUESDAY, June 6. Mr. Taipan came to see us this morning. He has lived well all his life, has a craving for alcoholic stimulants and a bad liver. As he always pays the shroff at the end of the month, it doesn't pay us to be rude to him.

We examined him all over, slapped his back, punched him several times, and "listened-in" for five minutes. "Never seen you fatter," we said—"although we don't like the way your leg jumps. Why not have an X-ray?"

He asked "How much?" and when we said $50 he looked relieved and told us he expected it to be at least $200.

Must remember to ask for more next time—still kicking ourself.

WEDNESDAY, June 7.—Tried hard to persuade Robert MacWhirter to have an operation for appendicitis (He doesn't need it, but we do). Remembering yesterday's experience we asked for $250. MacWhirter dropped in a faint, and it took half a bottle of whisky to revive him.

THURSDAY, June 8.—Young Henry Havalling rang us up this morning, and spoke rather nervously over the phone. He is coming over to see us at 7 to-night. We can guess what's wrong with him. Henry is a young man of 24 who spends too much time and money on the reckless side of life. If only all young men who live in the Far East would realise how these mishaps, they consider as trifles and not worth worrying about, may lead to ruptured lives and cause even their sweethearts to turn away from them they would have it attended to at once. There is nothing so disgraceful as hollotosis—even your Best Friend won't tell you—so we think a prescription for a mouth wash and some Listerine will fit the bill for Henry.

FRIDAY, June 9.—Have not been feeling at all well. Developed high fever early this morning, so decided to visit one of these herbalists. One cannot afford to take risks out in this part of the world.

POLICE HUMOUR.

It was seven o'clock in the morning. It might have been a little earlier, when he came to the door and awakened the household with his knock.

He was a policeman, a big game hunter to boot. He wanted to see the licences for the dogs in the garden. The inmates had been out until four a.m. but what did that matter with the majesty of law concerned.

What! You don't see anything funny in that? Frank, with license and mynre, neither do we. But you must not blame us. That is police humour, not Kelly humour.

It just shows out what comes of reading Sexton Blake fiction in your spare time.

"O.K. Go ahead and stop buying from us and see what a tough time you have finding real chop suey."

New Street Lighting Systems.

PARIS INVENTION

Paris. Paris engineers have successfully experimented with an invention which they claim will revolutionise the street lighting systems of the world's capital cities.

This is a photo-electric 'eye' which, exposed to the daylight, automatically switches on the electric current when the daylight reaches a given degree of weakness, and increases the strength of the current in direct ratio to the gathering darkness, so that full brilliance is achieved when night has completely fallen. With the first streaks of dawn the process is reversed.

"Our invention," an official said "will save thousands of pounds on the present wasteful system. Installed in all capital cities, where by blocks of street lamps are switched to clocks which switch the lights on at a regulated hour. An enormous amount of wiring, and a large number of clocks are required for this, and a large margin of error is inevitable. Another advantage is that the group of weather watchers scattered about any great city who have to turn on the lights in the event of fog or bad weather will be replaced by the automatic photo-electric 'eye.'—Reuter.

TO SAVE U.S.

2,000 PLANS SUBMITTED

"SOME ARE PRETTY WILD"

Washington, D.C. More than two thousand plans have poured in upon Miss Frances Perkins, U.S. Secretary of Labour and first American Woman Cabinet Minister, from as many citizens anxious to help the nation since she took office.

Probably every person in official life in Washington has had an avalanche of such plans over a period of several days, but it remained for the statistical-minded Miss Perkins to assemble all that arrived in a single book-case and classify its contents.

"The kind of thinking that is going on in America to-day is very interesting," she said of this type of arriving mail-matter.

"Some are pretty wild, but I find grains of truth in them."

Her own view on public works was that $2,000,000,000 or $3,000,000,000 worth of projects could be put under way in four or five months in Federal, State and county projects, not "monumental" works, but of a nature to raise the American standard of living, by means of more roads, sewerage systems, bathrooms, low cost-houses, and telephone and light poles leading to farm dwellings.—Reuter.

AUSTRIA'S RICH MEN

CAPITALISTS FEW & FAR BETWEEN

Vienna. Austria, according to the official Bureau of Statistics, has only two persons with an annual income of one million schillings (about $30,000) or over.

Only 300 taxpayers, out of a population of 6,500,000 have an income larger than £4,000 a year. There are 9,000 who annually receive an income of from £700 to £2,000.

The average yearly income of taxpayers is £90, and only one-third of the population pay an income-tax.—Reuter.

ENGLISH WOMEN WIN AT BRIDGE

Ireland Beaten In First International

London. England defeated Ireland by more than 3,000 points in the all-women's contract bridge international match held in London recently.

It was the first international bridge contest in which Irish women have played.

The score, after two days' play, was England 29,870, and Ireland 26,810.—Reuter.

ENGINEERING WOMEN

RUN WORKS AT KENSINGTON

20 GIRL HANDS

London. The only engineering works in the world run entirely by women is at Kensington. Every employee, from proprietor to office girl, is a woman and much of the work is manufacturing the engineering inventions of women.

Girls clamour along high shafting there, armed with grease guns, while others pry deep into the delicate works of big machines.

The business was started by a woman and at no time in its history has any man had a hand in it. Its founder, manager, organiser, and inventor of some of its products is Miss Ashberry.

Miss Ashberry now employs 20 girls as engineers but at first she had so many rebuffs from men that the enterprise was almost killed. Some of the girls in her plant left offices and shops to learn engineering. One was a speedway rider and another a road scout.

Not long ago Miss Ashberry was approached by the British Broadcasting Company to make a special gramophone pick-up. She was given the work because the B.B.C. thought a woman would be the best to handle it as the details were a confidential secret.

The factory makes delicate aeroplane parts for many of the great air companies, turned parts for ships, wireless sets, razor blades, motor-car clutches, hosiery machines, bacon-cutting machines, and a patent fly-trap invented by a woman.—Reuter.

FLYING PROBLEM SOLVED

OVERCOMING FOG BUGBEAR

Paris. Yet another weapon has been invented against that bugbear of the airman—fog—and it would seem as if the problem of landing "blind" has been solved.

Bereft of all technicalities, the system which is now on trial at Villeneuve-lez-Vertus near Epagny, consists of concentric electric cables buried slightly below the surface of the aerodrome and extending the whole of its area, each circle being connected with the aerodrome's transmitting station. Two of the cables serve to warn the pilot that he is above his aerodrome while all the others give him his varying heights as he manoeuvres to land.

The system presupposes, of course, knowledge of prearranged signals between pilot and the aerodrome wireless station.—Reuter.

SEPOYS BELABOUR INSULTERS

INCIDENT IN FRENCH TOWN NEAR CALCUTTA

Chandernagore, June 5. Jeered at by a party of Bengalis, a whole regiment of French Indian Sepoys turned out with cudgels and belaboured the men who had been insulting them.

Several of the Bengalis were seriously hurt and had to be taken to hospital.

The sepoys concerned are now confined to barracks in this town, which is a French possession near Calcutta.—Reuter.

STEAMER ON FIRE

Passengers Rescued Through Port Holes

Vienna, June 5. A fire, which broke out early this morning on the Danube passenger steamer Franz Schubert, which was travelling from Vienna to Linz, was extinguished only after a couple of hours of extremely arduous work on the part of the fire-brigade. During the operations, a police commissary fell overboard and was drowned.

It was only after the greatest difficulty that the passengers and crew were rescued through the port holes.—Trans-Ocean Kuo Min.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

WIDOW IS SELDOM GAINED WITHOUT SUFFERING.—Sir Arthur Helps.

Li Yuk was admitted to the Kowloon Hospital on Saturday, with injuries caused in an attempt to alight from a bus at Samshing.

Struck down by a private car No. 288 in Morrison Gap Road on Saturday, a woman, Ng Ngau, was admitted to the Government Civil Hospital with injuries to her head and hands.

H.M.S. Hermes, Capt. W. B. MacKenzie, which has been attached to the China Station since 1927 left for England this morning shortly after 10.30 a.m. She is due to arrive at Chatham on July 24 and will be transferred to Devonport about September 15 for large repair work at an estimated cost of £110,580. H.M.S. Churrua, also left for Home waters this morning taking on board a number of officers from the China Squadron and ratings from the Yangtze gunboats.

LONDON POLICE REFORM

COLLEGE FOR HIGHER TRAINING

DIRECTORS OF CRIME WORK

Five main reforms in the organisation and administration of the Metropolitan Police—Force, which are to be the subject of immediate legislation, are set out in a White Paper just issued.

The proposed changes, in brief, are:

HIGHER POSTS.—A certain number of young men to be recruited by a system of competitive selection for appointment, after training, to posts of the inspector grade.

The men to be selected from those who have joined the Force as constables and from candidates from secondary schools, public schools, and universities.

All candidates to appear before a Selection Board.

A Police College to be established for training of selected candidates from the Force and from outside.

Candidates on leaving College to be appointed on probation to new grade of Junior Station Inspector.

CRIME DETECTION.—The marked line of cleavage between the C.I.D. and uniform branches is to disappear. In each division there will be an additional Chief Inspector, "the local crime intelligence officer," with the special duty of organising and directing crime work.

SHORT-TERM SERVICE.—A quarter of the Force, 5,000 constables, to be employed on short service engagement for 10 years.

PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT.—A definite end to be put to the existing system which permits the private employment of police "on gratuity" in their own time.

POLICE FEDERATION.—College-trained officers, chief inspectors, and sub-divisional inspectors to be excluded from Police Federation.

The number of Federation meetings held in official time to be reduced in accordance with new rules.

ECONOMY OF MAN-POWER.

While all the proposed reforms are alike necessary to the well-being of the Force, the White Paper states, "in particular the Government are convinced that the combined effect of the changes in organisation which it is now proposed to introduce in providing a younger and more highly trained staff of officers, and a more active and energetic body of constables, will be to secure not only a material improvement in the general standard of efficiency, but also a substantial economy of man-power. It is impossible to say definitely that there will be an actual reduction in the present numbers, but the improved general efficiency which will be secured should at least suffice to avoid the necessity of increasing the Force in proportion to the population of the Metropolis."

The Government are satisfied that the effect of the schemes, when they come into full operation, will not be to increase the cost of the Force.

BLOWN OFF HIS MULE

LUCKY ESCAPE FOR A COLONEL

Alexandria. Lieut-Colonel Hassan Hilal of the Egyptian Army was riding over the desert on a mule.

Suddenly there was a deafening explosion and the officer shot sky-high from the back of his mount, which dropped dead.

Landing on the sand, he miraculously escaped with nothing more than a severe shaking.

It seems that the mule's hoof accidentally struck an old British shell, a legacy of the war days, which was lying slightly buried in the sand.

The impact caused it to explode.—Reuter.

IMPROVING THE RAILWAYS

NEW DEVICES EACH MONTH

THE LATEST

London. Month by month now and wonderful devices are brought into use to save time and work on the railways.

To-day the boilers of engines clean themselves out automatically and trains on the railway lines themselves control colour light signals. There are portable machines which fasten tight bolts on sleepers, and electric welding apparatus which will build up new steel on rails worn at the points where they cross, without it being necessary to move them.

One man in a signal-box working on the new electric system, can do, with ease, work which needed something like ten men under the old system.

There is a machine in use which whirle great engine driving wheels round at a speed equivalent to 70 miles an hour, and so tests their balance before they are fitted into the engines. There are appliances which, when trucks are being made, can make forty-eight holes, and screw home 48 bolts in a few seconds.

A fireman in the locomotive sheds has only to press a button—and huge coal bunkers made of concrete mix, weigh up and supply tons of coal to the engines.

One of the latest "gadgets" to be tried out on the railways is a device to be fitted to express trains. By means of the photo-electric cell, this device will switch all the electric lights in the train on when a tunnel is entered, and will switch them off again when the train re-emerges into daylight.—Reuter.

RIOT AT FASHION PARADE

WEDDING "STUNT" WHICH FAILED

London, Ontario.

Because a wedding did not take place as scheduled at a fashion review, women patrons created such a disturbance that police had to be rushed to the scene and were obliged to arrest a man in order to restore peace.

The dress show was held at a local hotel, and one of the attractions advertised was a wedding ceremony.

Women turned up in their hundreds and everything was going splendidly when—

The bride and bridegroom arriving and blushing announced that the marriage knot had been tied elsewhere.

The patrons of the show were furious. There were loud cries of "Fraud!" "Hoax!" mingled with more colourful ejaculations. Chaos broke loose. Amid screams of "Give us our money back!" A general melee ensued and the exhibits were in danger of destruction.

The police arrived at the double; but peace was only assured when the women's clamour for action had resulted in the removal of the show—on a nominal charge.—Reuter.

$2,500,000,000 IN DEFAULT

U.S.A. INVESTORS UNLUCKY

New York.

Nearly $2,500,000,000 dollars of foreign government, State, city and corporate loans held by American investors, institutions as well as individuals, are estimated to be in default with respect to either interest or sinking fund payments, or both. This figure is exclusive of so-called political debts—that is, $10,000,000,000 of obligations plus interest arising from the war and owing to the United States.

On the basis of American investments abroad, aggregating as on January 1 well over seventeen billion dollars, the amount in default represents less than 15 per cent of the total—a figure which does not compare unfavourably with similar statistics relative to other types of securities in U.S.A.

On the basis of quotations at the beginning of the year, or conservative appraisals the depreciation in the price of foreign securities and investments was estimated at $8,000,000,000.—Reuter.

Every day the figures are "improving." There exists a plant today employing only 208 men, which turns out 10,000 motor car chassis per day or, approximately 50 motor chassis per man each day.

This is by no means the end of the story. A razor blade has been invented which has been withheld from the market, because it will last lifetime. Manufacturers of razor blades and the workmen must be shivering in their shoes.

In some industries to-day, one man with the aid of machinery is doing the work which required 100 men so recently as the end of the War.

Efficiency systems and machines are dispensing with men in accounting houses and banks. Quite recently, sixteen policemen were dispensed with in Piccadilly Circus by automatic signals.

Machines supervise machines, and science has advanced to such a stage that it is possible, at a distance, by a wave of the hand to stop or start machinery. All this is only an indication of what is to come. What will happen when the atom and spectrum is more thoroughly understood?

At the present time we have no doubt arrived at a peculiar stage. Plot the figures of production and labour, and the results say that the more houses, blankets, shoes, motor cars and general goods we produce, the less labour is required.

We are faced with a set of circumstances, unique in the history of Man. In them there is a wonderful opportunity of benefit, or of catastrophe. Which? We have to decide! There is no escape!

(The fourth article, to-morrow, will deal with the relationship between Money and Physical Wealth.)

COMMEMORATED.BRONZE BUST DONATED BY CHINESE FRIENDS

An interesting ceremony, in connexion with the unveiling of a bronze bust of the late Mr. Lau Chu-pak, the first Chairman of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce and former member of the Hongkong Legislative Council, took place at the Chinese Chamber of Commerce on Saturday afternoon. The present Chairman, Mr. Wong Kwong-tin, performed the ceremony in the presence of many members, including the Hon. Sir Shou-son Chow, the Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall, the Hon. Mr. T. N. Chau, Mr. Lau Tak-po (son of Mr. Lau Chu-pak), and other members of the family.

The bronze bust, a striking resemblance to the late Mr. Lau, was a work of art executed by the well known firm of Raoul Bigazzi, of Florence, Italy. The bust rests on a white marble pedestal about five feet high, which will be displayed permanently in the hall of the Chamber. Over one hundred members of the Chamber were among the donors of the bust.

Distinguished Career.
The late Mr. Lau Chu-pak's distinguished career, in which for over forty years he closely associated himself with public works in Hongkong, was referred to by Mr. Wong Kwong-tin.

He recalled that Mr. Lau Chu-pak was associated with no fewer than 25 enterprises and commercial firms during his life, and participated in the work of 10 public institutions, including his work as founder and first chairman of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, chairman of the Tung Wah Hospital, unofficial Chinese member of the Legislative Council, the honorary adviser of the Kwangtung Government, member of the Sanitary Board, District Watchmen's Committee, Po Leung-kuk, and numerous other minor boards and institutions of an official or public nature. The Chairman concluded with references to Mr. Lau Chu-pak's keenness in the promotion of education, and the various honours given to him by the British and Chinese Governments towards the end of his energetic and successful career.

After this, Mr. M. F. Key also spoke a few words on behalf of the Hongkong General Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Lau Tak-po thanked the Chairman and all members of the Chamber for their most generous means of honouring his late father.

PSYCHO-THERAPY AND CRIME

SCIENTIFIC INQUIRY IN PRISON URGED

Comments on the theory that psycho-therapy can cure many recidivists and most first offenders are given in the Prison Commissioners' report for 1931.

The Medical Commissioner (Dr. W. Norwood East) observes that no statistics are available to show how many law breakers in this country have had their criminal careers checked by psycho-therapy.

"As far as I am aware," he says, "no medical psycho-therapist has any extensive experience in this method of dealing with crime. Neither is it to be assumed that the prisoner who commits a crime as the result of an abnormal mental state is amenable to psycho-therapy because another individual with similar compulsions has been so relieved."

"It is a travesty," he adds, "to suggest that crime is a disease. But it is clearly the result sometimes of a neurotic disorder. A parade of abstract conceptions and unwarranted assumptions, however, creates hostility and delays progress where practical issues are important. The problem is to ascertain how many law-breakers are genuine when they declare that they desire to be cured of the pathological condition associated with the crime and how many of these can be treated with success."

Dr. East believes that a scientific investigation at a penal institution, recording failures and successes, is much to be desired.

ONE IN THREE SENTENCED

The statistical side of the report shows that out of 46,800 people over the age of 16 found guilty of indictable offences during 1931, 15,482—or about 33 per cent.—were sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude, or Borstal detention.

Offences against the intoxicating liquor laws accounted for 48 per cent. of the imprisonments of women and 10 per cent. of men. Actually there were 2,910 "receptions" of men and 1,851 of women known to have been in prison before, and the Commissioners make this comment:

"Many of these people are known to come into prison two or three times, and some of them nine or ten times, in the course of a year. It is probable, therefore, that a stage army of 700 or 800 men and 400 or 500 women accounts for these 2,910 and 1,851 'receptions'."

During the last 20 years the number of convictions for drunkenness has decreased considerably, but prison authorities cannot cope with the very high percentage of recidivism among one little group of women.

The Commissioners point out that persons convicted of serious crimes form only a small percentage of the total number sent to prison. Indeed, during the year, out of every 100 receptions of men, only 15 were due to crimes sufficiently serious to entail sentences of over three months. The corresponding figure for women was nine.

The number of persons imprisoned for house-breaking showed an increase of 235 over the previous year, and the number for false pretences an increase of 170.

70 "SPECIALS" RESIGN

SYMPATHY WITH AN EX-POLICE CHIEF

Several senior officers and between 60 and 70 other ranks of the Metropolitan Special Constabulary of the J Division have resigned.

Following the big hunger march by the unemployed in London last November, there was disciplinary action in the case of a Chief Inspector.

He is a business man living in the division, and when interviewed on Saturday he asked that for obvious reasons his name should not be revealed.

"An order was supposed to have been given to do a certain thing during the hunger march," he said. "I did not do what it was supposed, I should have done, and was charged with not carrying out orders. I was summoned to a Disciplinary Board in January, and I denied that I was at fault. Witnesses were heard on both sides."

"Subsequently I was notified that they had found against me, and was asked to tender my resignation."

"I did so," he added, "and since then many of my colleagues, in the belief that I have been unjustly treated, have followed suit."

The districts covered by J Division of the Specials include Hackney, Dalston, Leyton, Leytonstone, Wanstead, and Woodford.

AIR DASH TO CABINET MEETING

IMPORTANT WAR DEBT DEVELOPMENT

SIR JOHN SIMON RECALLED

London, June 11.
Sir John Simon, the Foreign Minister, who was taking a week-end holiday at Le Touquet and who was not due to return to England until to-morrow, was urgently summoned this afternoon and travelled immediately by special plane.

Sir John was needed in London for a suddenly called meeting of the war debt committee of the Cabinet, at which Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Mr. Neville Chamberlain and Mr. Walter Runciman were present.

The meeting lasted for well over an hour, and although no inkling has been given of the reason for the sudden conference, the circumstances are held to denote developments in the war debt discussions with Washington.

WASHINGTON CONFIRMS.
A message from Washington seems to confirm the week-end reports that the British Cabinet has tentatively offered the United States a token payment of $2,000,000 on account of the June instalment of the war debt.

The Washington message says that President Roosevelt's assistants and advisers are now studying the legality of any part payment of war debts and whether the acceptance of a part payment would constitute tacit approval of the non-payment of the balance.

LAUSANNE INFLUENCE.
The issue is also the subject of comment in the American newspapers. The Baltimore Sun, for instance, believes that any ten per cent. offer might create political complications since it would seem to be based upon the Lausanne Pact.

The London Morning Post declared on Saturday that if the British offer was refused, the British Government would probably make use of the right accorded by Congress to make the June payment in silver, which would mean that the full instalment would be met at a cost of only $12,000,000 instead of $19,000,000.

The Government would probably make use of the Indian Government's surplus silver for the purpose.

EUROPEAN RUNS INTO SHOP FRONT

MISHAP DUE TO GREASY ROAD

WANCHAI SMASH

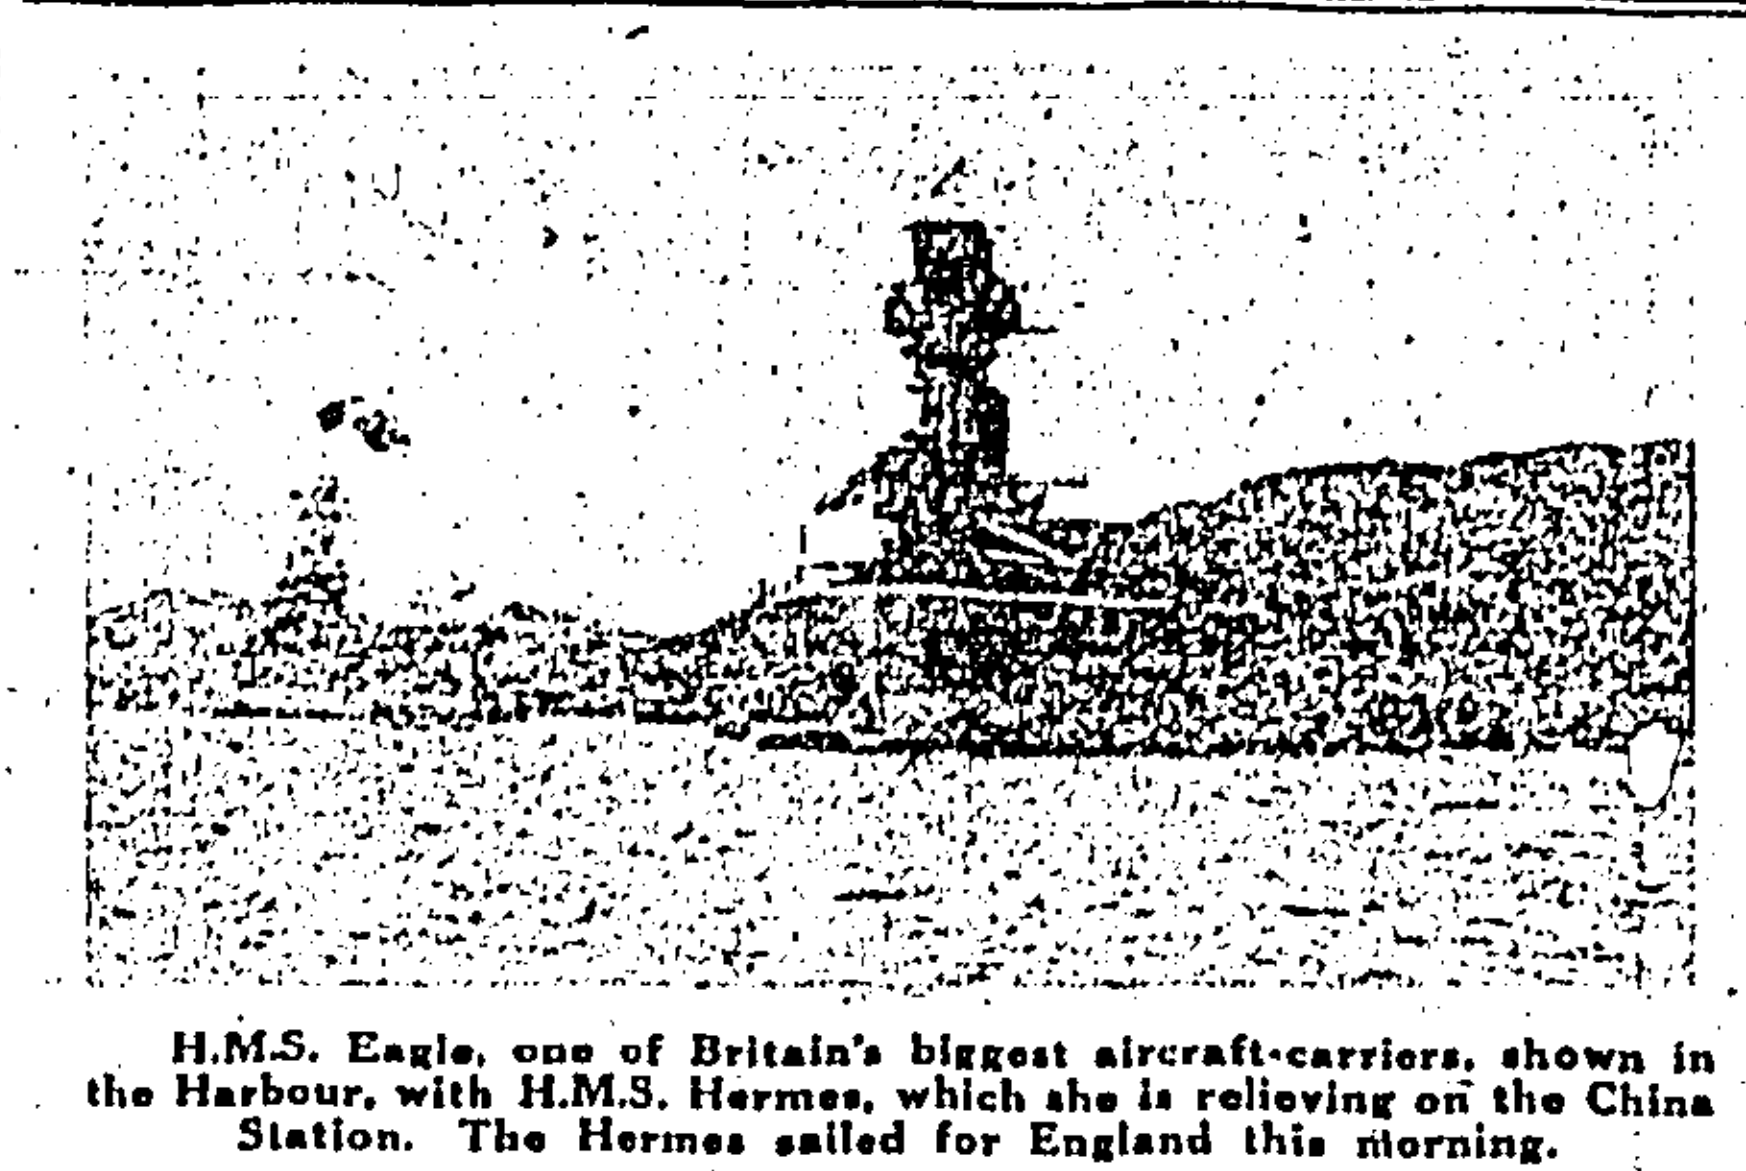

While driving in Wanchai along Queen's Road East last evening, Mr. T. Black, of Queen's Gardens, had an alarming experience. His car skidded and crashed into a shop.

The roadway was in a greasy condition from intermittent showers, and just as the car, No. 139, driven by Mr. Black, had passed the Grand Theatre, it began to skid towards the left.

In endeavouring to regain control, the driver swerved the car to the other side. It shot across the road, crashed against a pillar, mounted the pavement, and in slowing round, was brought up against the showcase of a shop at 22, Queen's Road East.

The showcase was completely wrecked, but fortunately no-one was injured. Mr. Black suffered minor abrasions. The car was badly damaged.

Tentative Agreement Reached at Washington

IRISH CIVIL WAR DANGER

GUN-RUNNING ON CORK COAST

SPLIT IN I.R.A.

London, June 12.
A grave threat of civil war in the Irish Free State is envisaged by the Dublin correspondent of the London Morning Post.

It is stated that as a sequel to the Roman Catholic hierarchy's denunciations of Communism, there has been a split at the headquarters of the Irish Republican Army, some of the most prominent leaders of which have broken away in the hope of being able to form a Red Army.

The Red Army will, it is stated, act under the inspiration of the newly-formed Irish Communist Party.

The situation has been greatly complicated by extensive gun-running on the South Coast of Ireland.

MILITARY ACTIVITY.

It is reported that large cargoes of arms and ammunition were landed along the coast of Cork County last week. The origin of these supplies is believed to be Soviet Russia.

There is great military activity at Cork and at Waterford. Irish Free State aeroplanes are patrolling the coast watching for gun-running vessels.—Reuter.

DYNAMITE TRAP FOR CAR

AUSTRIAN LEADER HAS NARROW ESCAPE

An attempt was made at midnight to assassinate Dr. Rintelen, the local governor of Styria, an ex-Minister of Education, who was motoring from Bruck an der Mur to Graz.

The car ran over a plank covering a tube filled with dynamite. A terrific explosion followed, but the speed of the car carried it out of danger.—Reuter.

For the Adamson Cup at the Happy Valley A. E. Charman (86-11 equals 75) and W. H. Edmonds (87-12 equals 75) tied and qualified. There were ten entries.

BRILLIANT FLIGHT

DISTANCE RECORD NOT BROKEN

Havana, June 11.
The two Spanish airmen, Captain Barbaran and Lieutenant Collar, who left Seville at 4.55 a.m. yesterday in an attempt to beat the British long-distance flight record, failed in their objective.

They were, however, responsible for a wonderful east to west flight across the Atlantic.

They landed at Camaguey, in Cuba, four thousand miles from Seville after flying that huge expanse of the Atlantic in less than thirty-six hours.

They were flying a biplane, and were carrying petrol sufficient to last them for 48 hours, but they were obliged to battle against stiff headwinds for the great part of the journey and in the circumstances, their Atlantic flight was a brilliant performance.—Reuter.

At six o'clock this morning, the temperature was eleven degrees lower than at two o'clock yesterday afternoon.

TO LOOM LARGE IN LONDON

DELEGATES POUR IN FOR THE CONFERENCE

The World Economic Conference, most important international gathering since the Versailles Peace Conference, will be opened in London to-day by his Majesty the King.

Delegates from sixty-six nations have been pouring into London during the week-end and the stage is now practically set.

The main tasks before the gathering, as foreshadowed by the preliminary Washington conversations, are a removal of trade barriers, exchange restrictions, quota systems, and tariffs, agreements for a common monetary policy, including more liberal credit and lower rates of interest on long-term investment, and the creation of a demand for credit by increased public expenditure.

EUROPEAN STATESMEN ARRIVE

London, June 11.
The officials of six Embassies were among the throngs which awaited a single train arriving at Victoria to-night, bringing, M. Daladier, the French Premier, together with the French delegation, the delegates from Italy, Czechoslovakia (with Dr. Benes at its head), Roumania, Portugal and Yugoslavia.

The train's arrival wound up a day of almost continual arrival of foreign delegates.

Turkey's chief delegate is the Foreign Minister, Tewfik Rushdi Bey.—Reuter.

SILVER RESERVES.

American delegates to the World Economic Conference have revealed that President Roosevelt reached an informal accord with some of the foreign statesmen who recently visited the White House with respect to the use of silver in central bank reserves.

This informal and as yet unbinding accord will be presented for discussion at the World Economic Conference and Senator Key Pittman said he hoped that one of the results of the understanding, if officially adopted, would be a world ratio of silver to gold. The present understanding does not attempt to fix a ratio.

The object of the understanding is to economise the use of gold, and, under its provisions, the United States would back its money issues with 25 per cent. of gold and five per cent. silver. Other nations would adopt similar provisions with whatever slight variations would be required.

BANKS AND MARKETS.

The central banks of the various nations would, under the plan mentioned above, be able to stabilise the price of silver. There would still be a varying market price for silver but it would be kept within definite limits by the operations of the silver banks. When silver prices are low, the banks will buy to keep the silver reserves at an actual five per cent. of their gold value in relation to the nation's money issues. When silver prices are too high, the central banks will sell. All operations will tend to prevent a wide variation.

This arrangement would provide a great use of silver and would result in a better price. Senator Pittman said that it would probably bring about a silver price that would make silver mining profitable. "He was not sure, however, that a ratio would be adopted."

A FAIR LEVEL.

"The plan is first to stabilise silver and bring the price up to a fair level," Senator Pittman said. "I can see the possibility of an agreement on a world ratio, but that is not assured yet."

Before the United States went off the gold standard the backing of the various kinds of paper

Mr. Neville Chamberlain and Mr. Walter Runciman, upon whom the brunt of the work of the British delegation will fall.

money issued varied. The Federal Reserve Bank was required to keep a gold reserve of forty per cent. of its Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation. Gold certificates were backed dollar for dollar by gold but National Bank notes had in the Treasury only five per cent. of lawful money behind them for final redemption. The redemption plan, however, was maintained constantly at the required level. United States notes, of which about $265,000,000 were in circulation, were backed by reserves of $166,000,000.

NOT ADOPTED.

The delegates did not go into details of the effect of the proposed plan on the monetary system of the United States but it was indicated that there would be fewer kinds of money.

The delegates did not go into details of the effect of the proposed plan on the monetary system of the United States but it was indicated that there would be fewer kinds of money.

MODIFIED GOLD BASIS.

Basle, June 6.
If the World Economic Conference at London requests the opinion of the Bank of International Settlements regarding currency stabilisation, the Bank's Council will recommend a system based on a modified gold standard but not on the same standard that prevailed until several leading nations were forced to abandon it, authoritative circles believe.

The Council last week decided not to submit a plan for currency stabilisation at the Conference but, if the Conference leaders make the request, the Bank will send representatives to London to discuss the matter.

It is asserted that the heads of the Bank of International Settlements are convinced that the failure of gold to meet the demands made upon it, resulted from lack of regulation. They are said to agree entirely with the statement of Mr. Gates McGarragh, who has just retired from the presidency of the Bank, that no good can come from returning to the gold standard.

T. V. SOONG AT CHEQUERS

CORDIAL TALK WITH MR. MACDONALD

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1921. Received June 12, 6.18 a.m.)

London, June 11.
During his visit to Chequers to-day, Mr. T. V. Soong, China's Finance Minister, had a long and cordial conversation with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald concerning Anglo-Chinese relations, and conditions in the Far East.

Mr. Soong to-night dined with Lord Astor.—Reuter.

AIR CRASH AT LISBON

PRESIDENT HAS A CLOSE SHAVE

PLANE WRECKED TEN YARDS AWAY

Lisbon, June 11.
President Carmona had a very narrow escape from death to-day when an aeroplane crashed no more than ten yards away from where he was standing.

The Portuguese leader, together with members of the Government and of the Diplomatic Corps, were watching a stunt flying competition at the time of the mishap.

One of the machines, carrying out a series of daring loops close to the ground, got out of control owing to the strength of the wind, which was blowing in heavy gusts.

The machine suddenly nosedived and crashed ten yards from President Carmona.

There was a general panic among the spectators, but President Carmona was quite calm and only remarked: "Please God he is safe!"

The pilot was severely injured.—Reuter.

Missionaries Die From Typhoid

STORY OF FINE HEROISM

Shanghai, June 12.
Mission circles in Shanghai have received news of two heroic British missionaries, the Rev. P. C. Mather and Doctor E. Fischbacher, of the China Inland Mission, who died at Tihwa, in Sinkiang province, from typhoid.

Mr. Mather passed away on May 24 and Dr. Fischbacher died three days later after they had been engaged in organising a hospital to fight the disease.

The two missionaries had just successfully passed through the siege of Tihwa.—Reuter.

and unless its defects are remedied.

SHORT-SIGHTED INDIVIDUALISM.

Mr. McGarragh upon his retirement last month, said that the short-sighted individualism which was applied to the standard amount to "unregulated anarchy."

It was understood that the Bank's Council prepared a plan for submission to the London meeting but later decided that, since many of its features would be offered in other programmes, the plan would not be offered as a rounded plan. The Bank's officials, therefore, will go to London if invited and discuss the monetary proposals.

BROWN TERROR IN MUNICH

SMASH CATHOLIC CONGRESS

POLICE FUTILE

STREET ATTACKS ON DELEGATES

Munich, June 11.
Shocking scenes of violence were witnessed in Munich to-day when the Brown Terror swept down upon the Catholic Congress of Apprentices and Journeymen.

The Congress was completely broken up by the violence of the Nazis, and thousands of the delegates, including the Vice-Chancellor of the Reich, Captain von Papen, hastily left Munich.

It is alleged that the disorders were the result of the objection of the Nazis to the wearing of uniforms by the delegates.

DELEGATE KILLED.

The Nazis attacked the delegates viciously in the streets and dragged others from their beds.

One delegate died after being cruelly beaten up outside the Cathedral.

Attempts by the police to intervene were futile against the organised Brown Shirts' onslaughts, which were even directed against Catholic priests.

The Nazis prevented the Archbishop of Munich from holding a Mass for the delegates.—Reuter.

JEWS COMPLAINT

Genova, June 6.

The complaint lodged by the German Jew, Herr Bornheim, against the validity of the anti-Jewish edicts in German Upper Silesia has finally been settled, the Council of the League of Nations adopting the report of Mr. Lester (Ireland). The German and Italian representatives, abstained from voting. The report points out that some of the edicts are incompatible with the statutes regulating the international status of minorities and can, therefore, not be applied. The German Government has voluntarily admitted its responsibility for any damages in the case of injured persons and all resulting claims will be settled through local proceedings.

AMERICAN LOAN TO CHINA

LONDON PROTEST CONTINUES

BONDHOLDERS' POSITION

London, June 12.

The outcome of the loan reported to have been made, to China by American interests, to finance the purchase of wheat and cotton, says The Times will be an increase in restiveness among British holders of Chinese loan bonds.

All bondholders must regard it as an aggravation of the case against their debtors that Chinese national revenue should be allocated to the service of new loans while their own claims continue to be ignored.

The organised action taken by the bondholders of the Shanghai-Nanking Railway in defence of their rights is a case in point.

RAILWAY EXTRAORDANCE

That this action has been initiated by a large body of local investors in this Chinese undertaking is the more significant as that has meant that the railway is not open to bondholders resident outside China of informing themselves upon the administration of the railway upon which their bonds are secured, and their charge of extravagance therefore carried more weight.—Reuter.

MAKE-UP ART

Beauty Aids for the Brunette

The medium brunette will find natural powder for daytime use, one of the many shades of peach or apricot for evening, together with one of the new orange rouges, which change when applied to the skin and take on the tint most becoming to the wearer, ideal for their type.

The dark brunette, however, has a wider range to choose from. She may experiment with both the dark and bright orange shades of rouge as well as the medium reds and the new raspberry tints. She will find that medium rachel, dark rachel, and dark peach shades of powder are best for her.

Lipstick, of course, should match the rouge, but many brunettes will find that they do not need rouge for daytime use at all, and in that case they can choose a bright lipstick, the brighter the better. This is especially suitable if you are a brunette with a true olive complexion.

Rose-Tinted Vanishing Cream

If you are a medium brunette with a disappointing yellow skin, try the effect of using a rose-tinted vanishing cream. You can buy this from your chemist or make it for yourself at home by mixing a little liquid rouge with an ordinary white vanishing cream. Add about six drops of liquid rouge to half an ounce of cream, and stir well together until the colour is well blended.

Test the colour by massaging a bit of the cream into the cheeks. If it gives a becoming pink tint to the skin do not add any more rouge, but if the skin still appears to have a yellow tint, then stir a few more drops of your liquid rouge into the cream until you have got it to the proper shade.

This cream will probably become streaky after it has been allowed to stand in the jar for a few days, but if you stir it up again the streaks will disappear.

For Dark Eyes

Eye make-up for the brunette is an important matter. She will find that a trace of eye shadow on the upper lid will make a tremendous improvement in the appearance of her eyes. The brunette with grey or blue eyes should use blue eye shadow and purple shadow if her eyes are very dark.

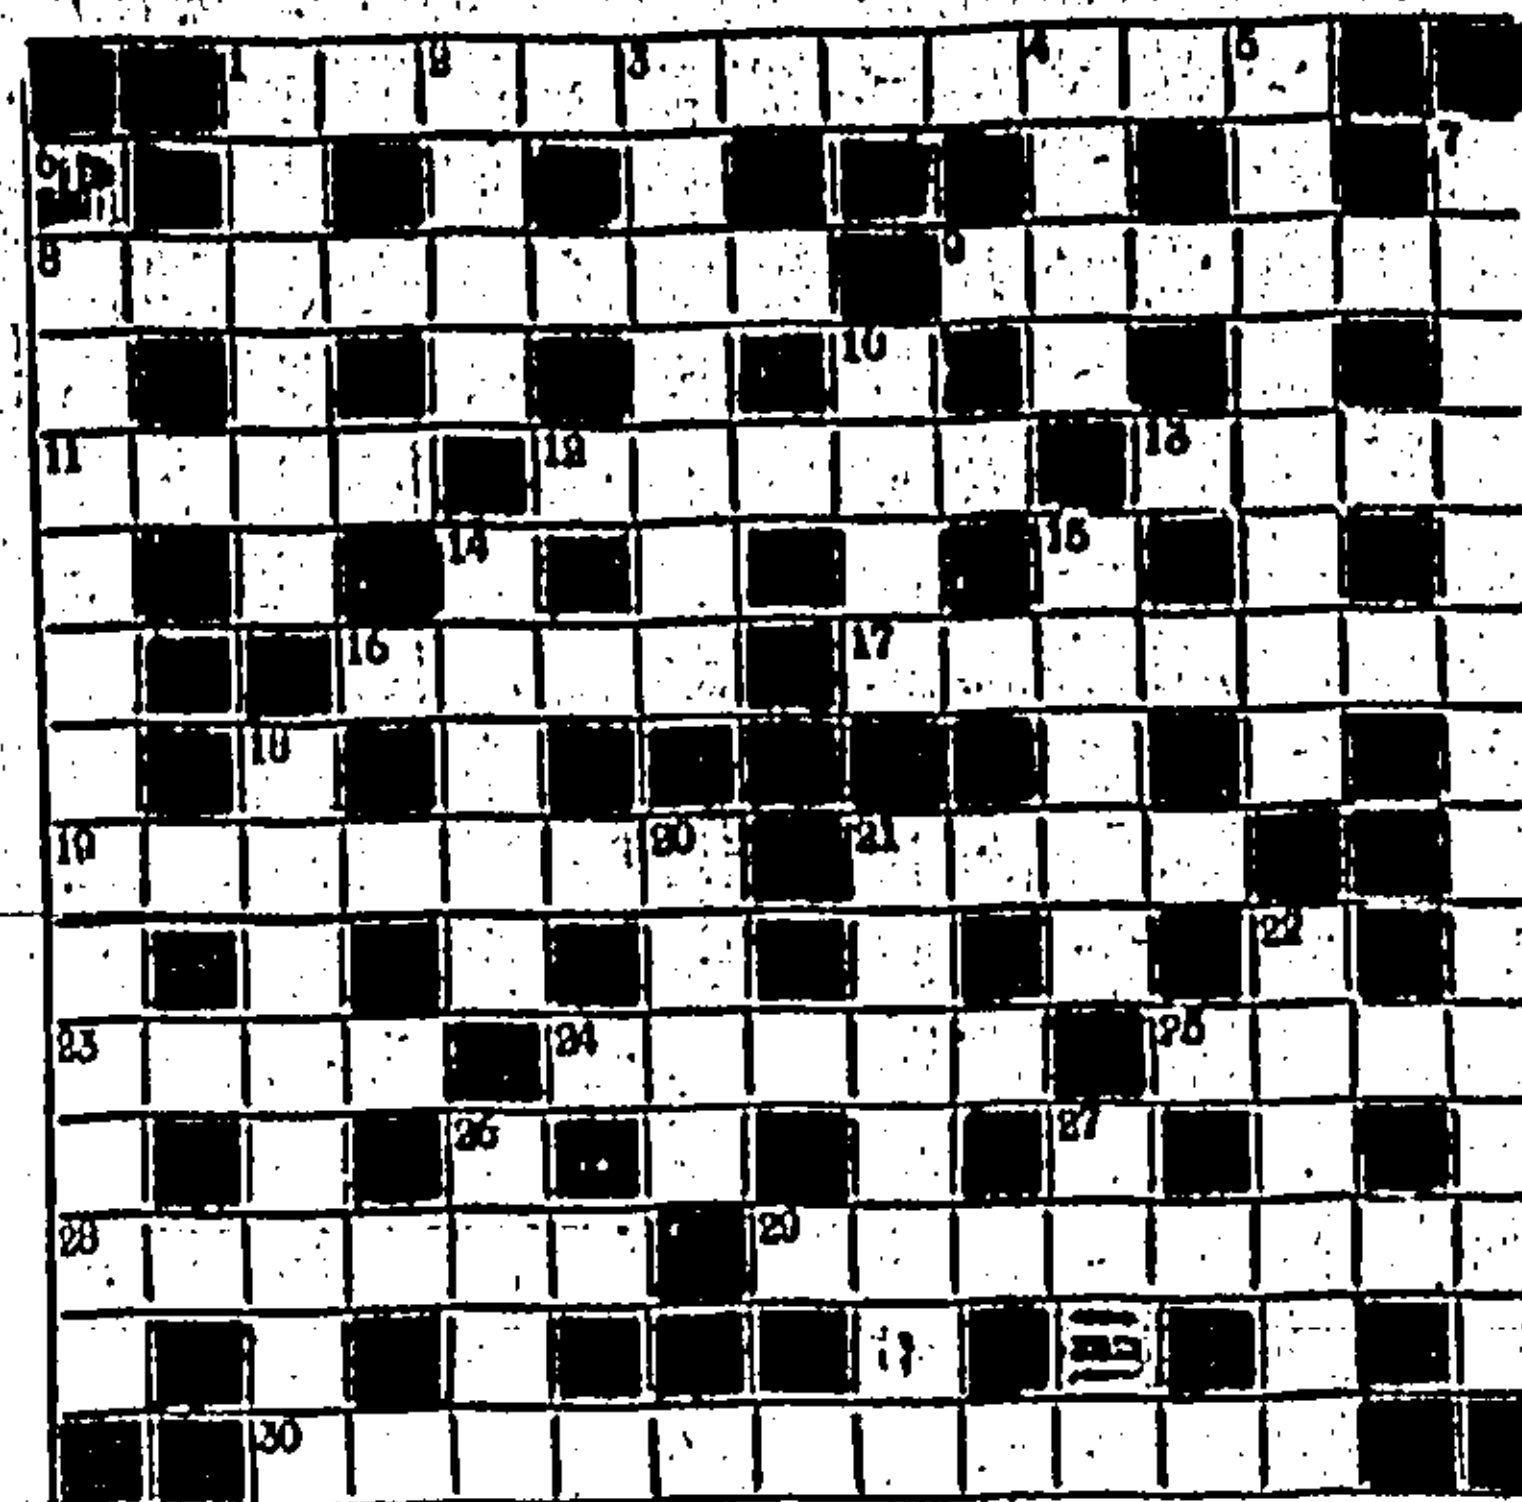

Another make-up tip which is useful to the brunette is to add a thin line of rouge just under the eyebrows when making up for evening. This emphasises the lashes and gives sparkle to the eyes.

Dark, lustrous eyelashes enhance the beauty of dark eyes a thousandfold, and many a brunette loses beauty because she does not pay sufficient attention to her eyes.

Remember that brushing is just as good for your eyelashes as for your hair, and regular brushing night and morning will help to make your lashes long and curly. You can buy little eyelash brushes for a few pence from most of the beauty shops nowadays.

If you want to make your eyelashes grow, brush them with olive oil. This will not only strengthen the growth but it will help to darken the lashes.

Eggs and Potatoes

EGG TIMBALE

This makes a delicious luncheon or supper dish. Hard-boil 3 eggs and cook 1½ lb. potatoes. Mash the potatoes and add them to 1 oz. butter, melted in a saucepan. Beat till smooth, then turn out on a floured board and roll out. Form into a ring on a flat fireproof dish, brush over with egg, and bake in a moderate oven till brown. Shell the eggs and cut each in four.

Make a white sauce with 2 ozs. butter, 2 ozs. flour, and 2 break-fastcupfuls milk. Add the eggs to the sauce, heat thoroughly, and pour into the potato ring. Garnish with chopped parsley and serve at once.

Potato Surprises

Thoroughly scrub 4 large well-shaped potatoes, prick them over, and bake in a moderate oven till soft, probably about 1 hour. Cut a slice off the top of each potato, and scoop out most of the centre, leaving only a potato shell. Carefully break an egg into each case. Melt 1 oz. butter in a saucepan, mash the potato that was removed from the cases, mix thoroughly with the butter, and force in a border of roses round each case. Bake in a moderate oven for 10 minutes, or until the egg sets, then sprinkle with grated cheese and brown quickly.

Highland Eggs

Hard-boil 2 eggs and boil 1 lb. potatoes till soft. Mash the potatoes and beat with 1 oz melted butter, and salt and pepper to taste. Shell the eggs and coat them thickly with the potato, then brush

PRACTICAL RECIPES

Kidney Soup

Wash an ox-kidney, and put it into a pan with 1 pint of water, and parboil it for about ten minutes.

Pour away the water, which is useless, cut the kidney into small pieces, and boil slowly in a quart of stock for two hours.

The stock can be made from a good broth bone. In the meantime make the thickening in this way:—Mix together 1 tablespoonful of cornflour, 2 tablespoonfuls of flour, a seasoning of ketchup, a little brown sugar, a little salt and pepper, and ½ pint of water.

Stir this into the soup, and continue stirring until it boils up again, and is thick.

Tomato Toast

Half a pound tomatoes, ½ ounce margarine, 1 egg, 1 medium-sized onion, salt and pepper. Peel the tomatoes, and slice them. Fry the chopped onion in the margarine till soft, but not browned.

Mix tomatoes and onion and seasoning, and simmer in the pan in which the onion was fried, cooking slowly for about fifteen minutes.

Remove from the direct heat, and stir in the beaten egg, letting this thicken the mixture, without boiling, then serve on strips of toast.

with beaten egg and roll in bread-crumbs. Repeat the egg and crumbing to prevent the potato bursting during the frying process, then fry for 5 minutes in deep fat.

Drain well, cut each in two, and arrange on a hot plate with some good white sauce poured round.

CHAPTER IV

The days dragged on. Monnie had not dreamed there could be pain like this. To know Dan was in the same town and not to see him was sheer torture. May proved to be a month drenched in sweetness. Lilac scent filled the air, foraythia blazed in every doorway, the nights were moonlit, soft and still.

Still no Dan. She did not even see him at the wheel of the roadster, skimming along the roads. At home the family forbore to ask questions. Ray was caught up in a whirl of high school activities. Bill came and went, ate his meals moodily, and slipped back to the garage. Monnie came out of her own daze of misery to realize there was something definitely wrong in Bill's sphere. He was more silent, more dour than usual. Poor Bill—it was having to work too hard and too early that had weighed him down so that, at 22, he seemed years older.

And their mother—Monnie had twinges of worry about her, too. She seemed cheerful as always but her step was slower. She sighed deeply and quietly when she thought no one was about. All the O'Dares seemed to be drifting. What was it all about? Why did other people have good times, bright, happy homes while the young O'Dares must carry this heavy burden?

At this point in her reflections Monnie always shook herself vigorously. "This is nonsense," she would remind herself. "Aren't I all well and strong? Haven't I a job and a roof over my head—and good friends?"

She was arguing with herself thus one day, hurrying home for lunch, when she ran straight into the arms of a tall man.

"I—oh, I beg your pardon!" All scarlet lips, flashing amber eyes, she stared up at him.

"Quite all right," Charles Eustace's deep voice reassured her. "I wasn't on the right side of the road, either."

They laughed together and Monnie's heart lightened. It was good to laugh with someone. She hadn't for days.

"Mind if I turn about and go your way?" Eustace wanted to know. "I'm just barging about for exercise."

How tall he was and, yes—how distinguished looking! It was odd she didn't think him better looking than Dan but she didn't. He was nice. Another girl, fancy free, might have found him much more than that but at the moment Monnie's heart was wholly engaged. She was insulated against the charms of every man in the world except Dan Cardigan.

"I've been wondering why I didn't see you around town," Eustace began, suiting his long step to hers.

Monnie smiled. "I've been here. All this time."

She could catch the scent of good leather and Virginia tobacco as he opened a pouch and stuffed his pipe. She stopped to watch him do it. Funny—she liked a man to smoke a pipe. Dan always smoked cigarettes. One after the other. Nervously. She shook herself. What a fool she was—always harking back to Dan!

The man glanced down at her shrewdly. "You are looking rather pale," he observed. "Are they working you too hard?"

Monnie shook her head. "It's spring—I guess. Maybe I need a change."

"This is a grand town to see spring in," said Charles Eustace. "This time last year—"

He stopped abruptly. Monnie looked up at him innocently to discover he was very white. She had a sensation of keen distress.

"Never mind," he finished briefly. "I was in France. It was beautiful there, but this is more peaceful. One can—can be at home here."

There was, obviously, something too painful for him to speak about. The two walked on in companionable silence.

"I say," he went on after a few moments, "I've been wondering if I couldn't persuade you to come up to my place for dinner one night soon. Perhaps your mother—and that young sister of yours. I'd ask a few other people. We could have a sort of picnic. My boy, Kong, is a wizard at fried chicken."

"That would be lovely," Monnie said. "We'd like to come."

"Would you really?" There was something very boyish in the way he asked that.

"Of course." She could smile at this man, be friendly and gracious with him, because she wasn't in love with him. Oh, how stupid was love! It made you stiff and awkward and ungraceful of yourself.

"Splendid. How about Thursday next, then?"

She said Thursday would be fine. He would pick them up. About six-thirty. Monnie felt definite chills. That was something to look forward to, at any rate. Life had been so dull lately. And mother would love it.

She ran in, full of her adventure. "Mother!—Where—are—you?" Where's everybody?"

Silence greeted her. The kitchen was silent, full of noonday sun, dancing on the cups and saucers. The stove was unlighted.

"Mother!" Monnie ran upstairs, catching her foot for the thousandth time on the stairs.

But there was no one in the shabby front bedroom with the looped white curtains, so carefully darned. Her mother's bed, immaculately white, her dresser neat and tidy, all silently testified to the late occupancy of the owner.

Monnie grew frightened. Perhaps mother had become ill, had fainted in the bathroom! With fast beating heart she turned the knob. But that, too, was silent, empty.

It was not like mother to go off without leaving some word. What on earth could have happened? With a feeling of nervousness, Monnie put the kettle on to boil, measured tea into the cracked blue and white pot and sliced some bread for toast. She had to be back at the store within the hour. These preparations begun, she hurried to the phone. She would call Bill at the garage. He might be able to solve the mystery.

"Hello! May I speak to Bill, please?"

Mr. Harnett's voice, rumbling, intimidating, answered. "Bill? Bill's not here."

Her heart began to race faster. "When will he be back, do you know?"

The voice sounded sardonic now. "Couldn't say, I'm sure."

Desperately Monnie said, "Mr. Harnett, this is Bill's sister—Monnie O'Dare. Is anything wrong?"

There was an instant's pause—long enough for Monnie to hear, separately and distinctly, the hissing of the kettle, the ticking of the clock, and the thump-thump-thump of her own unruly heart. Then the man at the other end of the wire said with infinite deliberation: "Wrong enough, miss. There's been some trouble here and Bill's gone along to the station with Officer Garvan." "Trouble?" She almost screamed the word. "What sort of trouble?"

But the wire clicked. The connection was broken. She put the receiver back on the hook and went back to the kitchen. She stared for an instant at the steaming kettle before reaching to turn off the gas. She detached the toaster, noting dully that the two thin slices she had cut were smoldering blackly behind the wires. Then she put on her hat and wandered out into the street. She hadn't the least idea where she was going or what she was to do. Except that Bill was in trouble and her mother, wherever she was, needed her.

The police station. Monnie had never been inside it before, in all her life in Belvedere, and her heart quailed now at the prospect of entering its dour portals. She squared her shoulders and marched in.

There was a big, blue-coated man at the oaken desk just inside the door. He lifted an inquiring eyebrow at her.

"Is—Is Officer Garvan in?"

"No, ma'am."

She knew most of the policemen in Belvedere by sight but this man was a stranger to her. "I'm Monica O'Dare. Someone—I mean I was told I would find my brother here."

She knew her face was blazing and she could hardly speak above a whisper.

"Oh, them!" The man jerked his thumb in the direction of a door just behind him. "You can go in Nanking, June 10. A project for the construction of a railway stretching across north Kiangsi between Yushan and Pinghsiang, was considered here this morning.—Reuter.

There if you want to see the young feller."

Somehow her lagging feet carried her across the room, somehow her fingers turned the knob. She braced herself for the ordeal. Just inside Bill sat, looking dark and angry. Three men were with him, talking and gesticulating. And Monnie's mother, twisting her handkerchief.

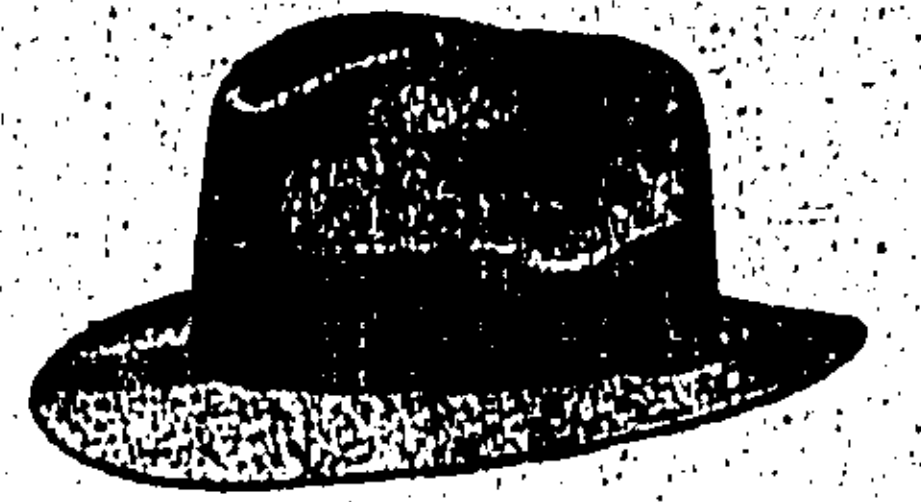

At the sight of the latter, Monnie's own terror took wings. What was she here for, if not to bring her mother strength and courage? Whatever had happened, her mother was not to suffer. Monnie made her step firm and her voice cheerful.

"What's happened?" she asked in a clear voice.

The biggest man, the one with the loud voice, turned to stare at her. "Matter enough!" he announced belligerently. "This young man's under arrest. Who are you?"

$2,500,000,000 IN DEFAULT

U.S.A. INVESTORS UNLUCKY

New York. Nearly $2,500,000,000 dollars of foreign government, State, city and corporate loans held by American investors, institutions as well as individuals, are estimated to be in default with respect to either interest or sinking fund payments, or both. This figure is exclusive of so-called political debts—that is, $10,000,000,000 of obligations plus interest arising from the war and owing to the United States.

On the basis of American investments abroad, aggregating as on January 1 well over seventeen billion dollars, the amount in default represents less than 15 per cent of the total—a figure which does not compare unfavourably with similar statistics relative to other types of securities in U.S.A. On the basis of quotations at the beginning of the year, or conservative appraisals the depreciation in the price of foreign securities and investments was estimated at $8,000,000,000.—Reuter.

STEAMER ON FIRE

Passengers Rescued Through Port Holes

Vienna, June 5.

A fire, which broke out early this morning on the Danube passenger steamer Franz Schubert, which was travelling from Vienna which was extinguished only after a couple of hours of extremely arduous work on the part of the fire-brigade. During the operations, a police commissary fell overboard and was drowned. It was only after the greatest difficulty that the passengers and crew were rescued through the port holes.—Trans-Ocean Kuo Min.

FLYING PROBLEM SOLVED

OVERCOMING FOG BUGBEAR

Paris. Yet another weapon has been invented against that bugbear of the airman—fog—and it would seem as if the problem of landing "blind" has been solved.

Bereft of all technicalities, the system which is now on trial at Villeneuve-lez-Vertus near Epernay, consists of concentric electric cables buried slightly below the surface of the aerodrome and extending the whole of its area, each circle being connected with the aerodrome's transmitting station. Two of the cables serve to warn the pilot that he is above his aerodrome while all the others give him his varying heights as he manoeuvres to land.

The system presupposes, of course, knowledge of prearranged signals between pilot and the aerodrome wireless station.—Reuter.

INCIDENT IN FRENCH TOWN NEAR CALCUTTA

Chandernagore, June 5.

Jeered at by a party of Bengalis, a whole regiment of French Indian Sepoys turned out with cudgels and belaboured the men who had been insulting them.

Several of the Bengalis were seriously hurt and had to be taken to hospital.

The sepoys concerned are now confined to barracks in this town, which is a French possession near Calcutta.—Reuter.

MORE WOOL

1932 PRODUCTION INCREASE

JAPAN'S 'BIGGER IMPORTS

London. The world's wool production is not far below the record level of 1928 and 1929, despite five years of low prices, according to a review of the world-wool situation by the Empire Marketing Board. Wool production has fallen off in the United States and Russia recently. In Russia the decline is estimated at 50 per cent of the peak production of nearly 400,000,000 lb. in 1929. Russia is not now an exporter of raw wool. Japan has heavily increased her imports of wool. They exceeded 180,000,000 lb. in 1932, as compared with 72,000,000 lb. in 1926. The increased imports by Japan of Australian wool have absorbed almost the whole increase in Australian production.—Reuter.

Hitler's Family Tree

NAME ORIGINALLY HIEDLER

Vienna. The name of Adolf Hitler, the German Chancellor, was written "Hiedler" until about 1760, according to the newspaper "Waldviertler Bote", which gives some particulars of his family tree.

The family came from Walthersching in the Waldviertel region of Upper Austria, and can be traced back there to 1672. They then moved to Spital near Gmünd, now on the borders of Czechoslovakia. Hitler's father learned the trade of shoemaking, but later became a civil servant and rose to be a senior official in the customs.

Adolf was the third child. He has an elder brother and sister and one younger sister.—Reuter.

ENGLISH O.T.C. FOR CHILEAN SCHOOLS

CONSCRIPTION TO BE ABOLISHED

Santiago, Chile. The British Officers' Training Corps system is to be adopted in Chilean schools, as a first step in the abolition of conscripted service.

The British system was chosen after careful studies were made of military training methods in the United States and several European countries.

"By this means," the military commission has explained, "citizens can receive military training in the schools and afterwards their conscripted service can be so reduced as to lessen the burden on the individual and the State."

Military economies in this year's budget will be made as a result of the new system. It has been announced that the army will be reduced by 132 officers, including six generals.—Reuter.

HE LOST HIS TEETH—and HERE!

Pyorrhea has done its deadly work!

ONE tragedy followed another. At first it didn't seem serious. She noticed his bleeding gums and told him not to neglect them, but he did nothing. They became sponge-like and tender. Next the teeth loosened at the very roots! Then one tooth fell out, another had to be pulled out. Now half of them are gone.

Pity him? Yes. But he could have avoided it, easily, just as you can avert such a tragedy. Every morning and evening, brush your teeth with Forhan's for the Gums. More than a tooth paste, this scientific dentifrice is prepared to prevent decay pyorrhea. It not only keeps your teeth clean and white, but prevents pyorrhea from attacking your gums, your teeth, and your health.

BLOWN OFF HIS MULE

LUCKY ESCAPE FOR A COLONEL

Alexandria.
Lieut-Colonel Hassan Hilal of the Egyptian Army was riding over the desert on a mule.

Suddenly there was a deafening explosion and the officer shot sky-high from the back of his mule, which dropped dead.

Landing on the sand, he miraculously escaped with nothing more than a severe shaking.

It seems that the mule's hoof accidentally struck an old British shell, a legacy of the war days, which was lying slightly buried in the sand.

The impact caused it to explode. —Reuter.

Traffic Sub-Inspector Saunders said the number plate was a very good forgery and the only way they could detect it was by digging into the metal.

People were doing the trade of public rickshaws with private vehicles.

WAR ON PIRATES

TROOPS AND PLANES TO LAUNCH ATTACK

Changchun, June 11.
The Kwantung Army Headquarters declare that the recent offer of $30,000 for the release of the British captives from the steamer Nanchang was the final endeavour to effect their rescue by the Provincial authorities.

The case hitherto has been left in the hands of the Manchukuo authorities, but the bandit chief has scornfully refused to reduce the ransom from the sum of a million dollars previously demanded.

After referring the matter to the British Government, the Kwantung Army has now decided on enveloping the pirates by land and sea, and is despatching sufficient troops, who will be guided by aeroplanes, to ensure concluding the affair. —Reuter.

[The British officers from the S. S. Nanchang, who have been in pirate hands for nearly eleven weeks, are Messrs. Clifford Johnson, Hargrave and Blue.]

COLLISION AT SEA.

When the N.D.L. s.s. Holstein came into port during the week-end she had on board ten Chinese, the crews of two fishing junks which were struck and sunk by the steamer in a collision at sea on Thursday night.

The Holstein was on her way to Europe from Northern ports, and the collision is ascribed by Captain Karl von Methen, master of the Holstein, to the fact that the native craft were carrying no lights.

The two junks were sailing close together and were struck one after the other, and began to sink. Boats were launched from the Holstein, and efficient rescue work resulted in all ten men, comprising the two crews, being taken safely on board.

WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

The atmosphere on the eve of the opening of the World Economic Conference is altogether favourable. A sort of hopeful pessimism rather than of confidence prevails. Nations have been too busy devising bargaining weapons to justify the belief that comprehensive agreements will be easy of achievement, and furthermore, the shadow of the war debts question still hangs over London. Until this has been cleared away, the delegates will be clearly working under a disadvantage, although too much stress need not be placed upon this aspect at this moment. President Roosevelt must declare himself, one way or another, this week, and it is hardly to be supposed that he will jeopardise what prospects of success exists by adamant insistence on full payment of the June instalment. Leaving this on one side, therefore, to examine the agenda for the Conference, we find that it deals both with financial and economic questions in detail. It offers a broad plan for the restoration of prices and the resuscitation of world trade. The official representatives of those governments which participated in the formulation of the programme have commented upon the scope of their plan in the following words: "It will not, in our judgment, be possible to make progress by piecemeal measures. A policy of 'nibbling' will not solve the crisis. We believe that the Governments of the world must make up their minds to a broad solution by concerted action along the whole front. Action in the field of economic relations depends largely upon monetary and financial action and vice versa. Concerted measures in both fields are essential if progress is to be made in either." The official position of those who make this comment lends these forceful words peculiar importance, and also suggests that the outcome may finally depend upon the weight of expert opinion arrayed against political considerations. The agenda gives every indication that the experts who drew it up were fully aware of the present crisis, and were prepared to lay aside nationalistic pride and rivalry with a view to securing world prosperity. If the attitude which characterises the document can possibly be maintained by the Governments themselves, in spite of opposing political considerations, the success of the World Economic Conference is assured.

T. V. Soong

Mr. T. V. Soong has had a wonderful reception in London, where he will be China's chief representative at the World Economic Conference, and where, at the same time, he may do much to cement Anglo-Chinese relations. Mr. Soong has been Finance Minister of Chinese governments, first at Canton and then at Nanking, since 1925, and is regarded as the foremost Chinese financier of his generation. But he has become more than a financial genius in China; he has become the standard bearer of enlightened Chinese progressivism, fighting entrenched feudalism, slowly pushing back the guerrilla military incubus which has grown out of feudalism, and attempting to develop a genuine patriotism and concern for public welfare in a country where the family's interests always have stood above those of the nation. He has steadily enhanced both power and reputation. In China he is regarded generally as the country's outstanding statesman, a skilful diplomat in the realm either of Chinese or of Western politics. A solution of the Chinese "problem" has become distinctly more important to the world at large during the last two years than it has ever been before. Japan has ended by intervention the period during which the outside world had already to wait patiently for China's leaders to restore order from her own chaos, and the outcome of the undeclared Sino-Japanese war is not yet clear. Nor is it clear whether the Chinese and Japanese can settle their quarrel without dragging in other reluctant nations, or whether Chinese factions can agree sufficiently among themselves to make possible an agreement with Japan. Mr. Soong's visit may help to clarify these uncertainties. As a practical financier, he knows that continued friction between China and Japan is bad for business in both countries. As a professional statesman, he understands that settlement of the Sino-Japanese dispute is a matter of world concern. In London, far from the passionate atmosphere naturally aroused by conflict in China, Mr. Soong may be able to talk through with Japanese and disinterested statesmen a formula for setting the dispute which has aroused the entire world's anxiety.

Makers of Music

"Music should be, and ought to be, the greatest of popular arts." You will not find this quoted in any biography of Beethoven. Neither is it included in any obituary of Kreisler, Mary Garden, or Paul Whiteman. The author of "A Defence of Philosophic Doubt" said it. The speaker was Lord Balfour, one time Britain's Prime Minister, at the 1909 Royal National Eisteddfod of Wales on a subject always close to his heart—the democratic nature of music. This interesting sidelight on the diplomatist and deliver into philosophy, narrated entertainingly in the London Musical Opinion, leads the reader to sober reflection on the decline of music "made in the home." Aside from the fact that, in Lord Balfour's early days the concertina enjoyed a certain vogue even in the salons of the elect, can his predilection be lightly laughed at even in this mechanistic age? Moderns whose sole musical accomplishment rests in turning a knob might well pause to ponder if the easily-won entertainment of the radio can ever equal the charm evoked by individual attainments within the family circle. The gramophone and the radio have their rightful place, but to those music lovers who discipline themselves to "make their own music" in the home the world owes more than it commonly suspects.

WORLD CRISIS

III: A UNIQUE SITUATION FROM WHICH THERE IS NO ESCAPE

BY FREDERICK COPE, A.M.I.E.E.

(This is the third of a series of timely articles upon current industrial, monetary and economic problems by a local contributor.)

All that has been said so far is very well for internal trade, but when foreign trade is considered a different set of circumstances appear. A paper instrument is again called into play, termed a bill or draft.

In normal times, Mr. Bull of London, in order to pay for goods in New York, pays sterling in London for a dollar draft. For the reverse purpose, Mr. Samuel in New York would pay dollars for a sterling draft on London.

In London the dollar selling is set off against the dollar buying. In New York—the sterling selling is set off against the sterling buying. If the trade is equal the draft account would balance.

If the amount of drafts on New York exceeds those on London then the New York Banker is offered more pounds than he wants or can use; consequently, he will only buy the excess sterling at a discount. In normal times, this is one of the causes of the variation in the rate of exchange. If the balance becomes too large gold shipments have to be made.

The rate of exchange is the rate which the currency of one country will exchange for that of another. In a condition in which a number of countries are off the gold standard and a few countries are on a silver basis, the rate of exchange is a very variable factor, and one which is very obstructive to trade.

In Hongkong, we are aware that at one period $1 sterling cost $4, and at another it cost $22. In other words, we may say in a package of tea in Britain is priced in terms of gold $1, the price in Hongkong dollars for the tea has ranged from $4 to $22. This brings us to the price system.

PRICE SYSTEM.

The package of tea has not altered in real value, it is just the same. This enormous discrepancy between the real value and the money value of the article makes present day money appear to be a doubtful measure of value.

A very desirable quality of good money is "Stability of Purchasing Power." We certainly like to feel that the money in our pocket will buy the same service to-day, next year or twenty years hence, making allowance for the fall in costs, due to improved productive methods, when it should vary more.

It is evident that the present money system does not possess the virtue of "Stability of Purchasing Power." Whether the value of goods and services can be efficiently measured and expressed in terms of gold or any other metal, leads us to one of the burning questions of the day. It is held by some authorities to be the crux of the present World Crisis. Gold possesses very little utility value of itself. There is no close relationship between gold and goods and services. It is therefore argued that gold money cannot provide a good price system. But that is another question.

The present monetary system is certainly an unreliable instrument. It is delicately poised and soon thrown out of gear. To make matters worse, the war debts and reparations of the Great War were unduly loaded on to the system which previously was scarcely strong enough to deal with the rapid expansion of Commerce and Industry. It is almost looked upon as if the last straw has been placed upon the camel's back.

This is patent to-day when there are not more than three or four countries out of sixty on the real gold standard, and economic chaos is the rule.

PHYSICAL WEALTH.

We will now turn to this aspect of the economic question—the aspect of Physical Wealth. What has happened in this field? Let us make a fundamental examination of this question. For the purpose of this article, in the first place, we will define Physical Wealth as the result of Material plus Energy. Every commodity possesses these components.

Muscular energy was employed before the Machine Age. A man, tilled the soil with his own energy, with the assistance of the energy of horses or oxen. Material plus Energy resulted in Crops. These were reaped and transported by energy for ultimate use. Our houses, roads, motor-cars are all the products of material and energy in some form.

From the early times up to the time of the invention of machinery, production of goods steadily increased and man gradually became wealthier. From the time of Watt's Steam Engine, when mechanical energy began to be substituted for muscular energy, the rate of progress was quickened and over the last twenty years the rate of progress has been phenomenal, so much so that it has outrun our ability to utilise and take advantage of it.

We have now arrived at the paradoxical or insane stage of having produced a large supply of almost every conceivable commodity, and the only purpose our imagination can find for it is destruction.

Commodities which at one time required a large amount of human effort are now mostly produced by mechanical energy.

The startling fact of the day is that we are increasing production and decreasing labour at the same time. The longer we go, the more emphasized this will become, until only a fraction of human labour will be required. To those who have embraced the idea as a moral law, that Man, in order to justify himself, must give a considerable amount of time each day to the production of physical wealth, the position must present a serious state of affairs.

The facility of production, preponderance of goods, the shifting of the burden of work from Man to machine, are phases, or fat sorrows, by which, in the future, we shall be relentlessly pursued.

TECHNOCRACY.

It is not possible in this article to refer to the innumerable facts and indications, but amongst others we will take one or two quoted in a recent article by Howard Scott.

An artificial silk mill will soon be in operation in the United States, dispensing with all labour, except one man on a switchboard.

In such a stable industry as flour milling, during the last 30 years, three out of every four Mills have closed down. One out of every five persons has been released. The hours of the remainder have been reduced, and yet a twenty per cent. increase of production has occurred.

In the steel industry, during the same period, labour decreased from 70 man-hours per ton to 13 man-hours per ton; in other words, to obtain the same production to-day 57 out of every 70 men are released.

In the motor car industry, labour has decreased from 1,291 Man-hours per vehicle to 92, and within a short space of ten years, from 318 Man-hours to 92 Man-hours. The rate of progress was such that 212 men out of every 318 employed are now released, and the same work accomplished. In 1929, four million more motor cars were made. With 85 million less Man-hours than were used in 1919.

The Very Idea!

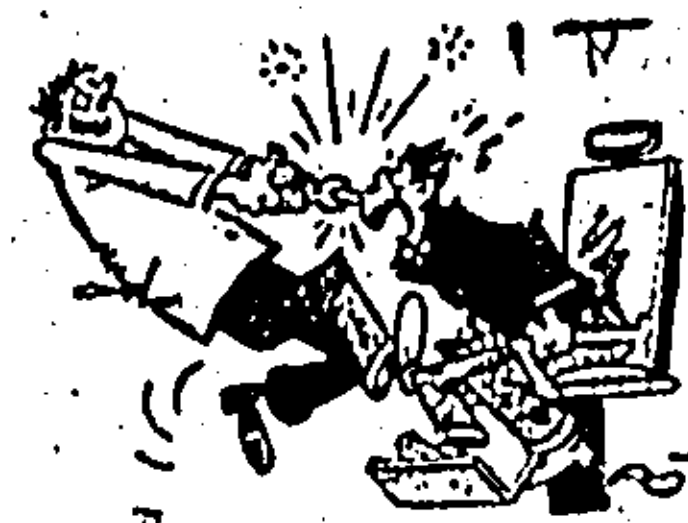

A DOCTOR WHO TELLS

By Eddie Kelly, Quack.

SALLOW faced and flat chested, we stand forth as the representative of those people who cannot, and don't want to be healthy.

Doctors may be alright in their places, such as curing chilblains and amassing large fortunes for themselves, but let them leave us alone.

We are proud of our ill-health. Every time we cough, people whisper about our chest, and sympathise with us. Why should we be foully done out of a complaint we have had for years?

Take dentists, too. They've often got a nerve the way they want to fool around with drills, and pyrothene and other dental terms.

Doctors and dentists are too eager with their needles and things. Things were different when we were a doctor. We would have still been one, only the B.M.A. found us out.

You've all heard of the "Diary of a Doctor who Tells." Well, we're going to give you the "Diary of a Doctor Who Doesn't Tell—Because He Can't."

Difference between us and a lot of other doctors is that we're game to admit it.

MONDAY, June 5. Called on Mrs. Brown this morning. Told her all about our lumbago; how it affects our arms and legs and keeps us awake at night with the pain. She advised us to suck a raw lemon and drink plenty of gin every morning.

Wonder if there is anything in these grandmother remedies?

TUESDAY, June 6. Mr. Taipan came to see us this morning. He has lived well all his life, has a craving for alcoholic stimulants and a bad liver. As he always pays the shroff at the end of the month, it doesn't pay us to be rude to him.

We examined him all over; slapped his back, punched him several times, and "listened-in" for five minutes. "Never seen you after," we said—although we don't like the way your leg jumps. Why not have an X-ray?

He asked "How much?" and when we said $50 he looked relieved and told us he expected it to be at least $200.

Must remember to ask for more next time—still kicking myself.

WEDNESDAY, June 7. Tried hard to persuade Robert MacWhirter to have an operation for pendicifis (He doesn't need it, but we do). Remembering yesterday's experience we asked for $250. MacWhirter dropped in a faint, and it took half a bottle of whisky to revive him.

THURSDAY, June 8. Young Henry, Havalling rang us up this morning, and spoke rather nervously over the phone. He is coming over to see us at 7 to-night. We can guess what's wrong with him: Henry is a young man of 24 who spends too much time and money on the rockless side of life. If only all young men who live in the Far East would realise how these mishaps, they consider as trifles and not worth worrying about, may lead to ruptured lives and cause even their sweethearts to turn away from them they would have it attended to at once. There is nothing so disagreeable as hollotosis—even your Best Friend won't tell you—so we think a prescription for a mouth wash and some Listerine will fill the bill for Henry.

FRIDAY, June 9. Have not been feeling at all well. Developed high fever early this morning, so decided to visit one of these herbals. One cannot afford to take risks out in this part of the world.

POLICE HUMOUR.

It was seven o'clock in the morning. It might have been a little earlier, when he came to the door and awakened the household with his knock.

He was a policeman, a big game hunter to boot. He wanted to see the licences for the dogs in the garden. The inmates had been out until four a.m. but what did that matter with the majesty of law concerned.

What! You don't see anything funny in that?

To be quite frank, with licence and myrrh, neither do we. But you must not blame us. That is police humour, not Kelly humour. It just shows out what comes of reading Sexton Blake fiction in your spare time.

"O.K. Go ahead and stop buying from us and see what a tough time you have finding real chop suey."

NEW GOVERNOR OF PHILIPPINESWELCOMED IN COLONY
THIS MORNING

The Hon. Frank Murphy, the new Governor-General of the Philippines, was not dismayed at his watery reception when the President Coolidge, en route for Manila, tied up at the Kowloon wharf in a heavy rainstorm this morning.

"I am just going to work. It will be a new job to me, but I have had many hard jobs before. I shall be happy there because I like the Filipino people and I like this class of work."

Among those present to welcome the Hon. Frank Murphy were the American Consul-General, Mr. Douglas Jenkins, Captain R. F. Walter, A.D.C. to H.E. the Governor and Lt. R. F. L. Mears, A.D.C. to H.E. the G.O.C., Major General O. C. Borrett. The distinguished visitor was accompanied by his sister Mrs. Teahan, and Mr. Teahan, Mr. Joseph E. Mills, economic adviser, Mrs. Mills and daughter; Mr. Edward G. Kemp, legal adviser; Mr. Norman G. Hill, private secretary; and Miss Eleanor Bumgardner, assistant secretary.

There were also on the boat, Brigadier-General Fred Cox, new Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs; and Mr. George E. Malcolm, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the Philippines, who, with his wife, is returning from vacation.

The Governor-General who was the Mayor of Detroit, is taking over the administration of the islands from Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, and although he naturally would not make any definite statements as to the policy to be followed in the Philippines, he intimated that the government would be more liberally inclined in the future.

The President has left me a clear field of action," he said. "I come with an open mind and will try to make my administration an era of good fellowship and understanding," and with a broad smile, the man who became an international figure through his efforts to pull Detroit out of the slough of depression, repeated that he liked the Philippine people and would enjoy working with them.

A full programme has been arranged for the Governor-General and his party during their stay in the Colony. This afternoon they intend to lunch at the Repulse Bay Hotel; this evening the Hon. Frank Murphy and Mr. and Mrs. Teahan will dine with Mr. Jenkins at his Peak residence, and after meeting local Americans, they will spend the night there. To-morrow, they will lunch with Sir William and Lady Peel at Mountain Lodge and from 4.30-5.30 p.m. they will be "At Home" at the American Club. The President Coolidge sails to-morrow at 6 p.m.

Born in the Michigan village of Harbor Beach in 1893, the Hon. Frank Murphy is a bachelor. He graduated from the University of Michigan in 1914, and continued his studies at Lincoln College, London, and at Trinity College, Dublin. During the war he served as a captain of infantry and, on his return to Detroit, was appointed district attorney, a position he held for three years. Later he became a judge and after six years of service in that capacity, was elected Mayor of the city.

FIRE-CRACKER
SEIZUREMACAO FIRM'S AGENT SUMMONED

The seizure of a large consignment of fire crackers, valued at about $10,000, and allegedly bearing a false trade mark of the Him Lung firm, Hongkong, had a sequel in the Central Court this morning, when before Mr. Wynne-Jones, the Wah Keung firm of Macao, were summoned.

Mr. D. L. Strollett appeared for the prosecution and Mr. Hin-shing Lo, instructed by Mr. J. M. Hall, for the defendant firm. Detective-Inspector Bright said the summons was served on Cheng Ming-sing, a representative of the Macao firm, at the Yik Hing Import and Export firm.

Mr. Lo stated the consignment was being sent to India or South Africa and on its way to the consignment was seized here by virtue of a warrant. The Wah Keung firm were claiming the cargo. He pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Strollett, asked for an adjournment, stating that Mr. Hall Brutton, who was handling the case, was sick. Considerable enquiries would have to be made.

Detective-Inspector Bright gave formal evidence of service of the summons and the seizure of 740 cases of fire crackers aboard lighter No. 4, berthed at the Sai Kung Wharf.

The hearing was adjourned.

VICTIMISED LADY
WANTEDSAID TO HAVE HAD HER BAG SNATCHED

The Tsimshatsui Police are trying to get in touch with a European lady who nearly had her handbag snatched from her by two Chinese lads outside the Y.M.C.A., Kowloon, on Saturday afternoon.

Charging Chau Kwan, 12, and Young Yau-loi, 14, with attempting to snatch a handbag, Detective Inspector Rozesky informed Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning that while the lady was standing outside the European Y.M.C.A., the two defendants walked up to her and the first lad tried to snatch her handbag. He was unsuccessful in his first attempt and when he tugged at it again, she screamed. A Chinese detective was attracted to the scene and went in pursuit of the two boys, finally arresting both some distance away. When he returned to the Y.M.C.A. with the bag, he found the lady gone.

Mr. Butters said he would like to have the lady in Court and hoped the publicity of the case would help the Police to trace her identity.

The case was remanded for 24 hours.

EX-CANTON OFFICIAL
ROBBEDTheft of Fans From His Residence

Li Chim and Lai Chan, locksmiths, were sentenced to three months hard labour each by Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistrate's Court this morning, for the larceny of two electric fans from the residence of Mr. Tung Cho-chung, an ex-Canton official, at 17, Fung Fat Terrace.

Sub-Inspector Noloth said that the defendants had gained entrance through a back door which had been left open. The complainant himself was not aware that the fans had been stolen until much later when defendants were arrested. The fans were traced to Hollywood Road, and one recovered, but the other was bought by a man who is out of the Colony. When he returns, it is quite probable he will be willing to return it to its owner, added the Inspector.

STATUE TO GERMAN
SLAIN BY FRENCHKAISER'S SON AT MEMORIAL TO SCHLAGETER

Berlin, June 6.
An address by the Nazi prince August Wilhelm was the feature to-day of the latest memorial celebrations in honour of Schlageter, whom the French shot for sabotage during the Ruhr occupation.

Speaking at Schlageter's native town of Schoenheim-Wiesental, the Prince declared "Just as the spot on which Schlageter gasped out his life will become a monument to the German people, so his home town will become a place of pilgrimage for all nationally-minded men and women."

The ceremonies closed with an impressive parade of about 10,000 Storm troopers and Steel Helmets before the Prince and the Premier of Baden.—Reuter.

PO PIU LOTTERY
HOUSEHEAVY FINES ON AN OLD MAN

Fines totalling $1,200, or six months' hard labour, were imposed on an elderly Chinese by Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning, on charges of keeping a gaming house for po piu lottery at 34, Circular Pathway, and for the possession of 4,990 tickets, valued at $998, all to be drawn to-day.

A girl, aged 15, who was jointly charged, was allowed to go.

Detective-Sergeant Moran said that the girl's arrest led to the discovery of the den. The girl carried a basket which contained many application forms for the lottery. The tickets were found in lots on a treated table in an empty cubicle.

For the possession of 297 tickets, another Chinese was fined $150, while a fine of $30 was imposed on a young woman who admitted the possession of 37 tickets.

A Chinese keeper of another po piu lottery house, at 44, Des Voeux Road Central, was fined $50 or one month and $30 or three weeks' gaol.

The Government Analyst's report stating that the pills were "pink pills" and not heroin, a Chinese woman who appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones in Court this morning was discharged.

Struck down by a private car No. 338 in Morrison Gap, Road on Saturday, a woman, Ng Ngau, was admitted to the Government Civil Hospital with injuries to her head and hands.

"The accused has nothing against him, but it is a mean theft as it was the complainant's only pair of trousers," remarked Sub-Inspector Elston prosecuting Kwan Chiu, a laundryman, with the larceny of a pair of trousers from Lee Chi, of 5, Sai Yuen Street, 2nd floor. Accused admitted the offence, and was bound over in surety of $75 for one year.

CORRESPONDENCE

Bus Services.

To The Editor Hongkong Telegraph

Sir,—The Eleventh of June signalled the passing of the control of the business of bus transportation into new hands.

The change has not been to any marked extent apparent to general view. The red and green-buses on the Island continue to run on the same routes as heretofore, and except for irregular intervals between waits at stops, the services under the new regime are operated in much the same way as when in other hands.

It is only on a closer investigation that the signs of change become apparent, and these have inspired misgivings in those who by necessity or convenience have to make frequent use of the conveyances.

Yesterday the writer went on a tour of all the main routes for the express purpose of observing the buses being worked under the new conditions and his experiences are set below in their strictly chronological order.

At 4 p.m. boarded a No. 5 Route bus at the stop opposite Blue Bird Store to proceed to Kennedy Town. On the way, the driver (presumably a Cantonese learning pidgin) missed a number of stopping places, although it was apparent that at these points a number of would-be passengers were waiting.

From Kennedy Town back to the city, the journey proved to be quite adventurous. In Belcher's Street, the bus narrowly missed a street porter hugging the pavement with his load. The bus however hit his bamboo pole and scattered a number of firewood slings he had strung on it, to the ground. Bus driver evidently considered the coolie to blame, for he stopped the bus and roundly cursed him in rich pidgin. Passengers began to become impatient.

When approaching a stopping place just before the Central Theatre was reached, a Chinese gentleman attempted to alight, and as a result went sprawling on all fours. The conductor shouted after him some rather belated advice.

Nearing Caroline Hill, the driver became plainly distressed. He was looking about for the usual stopping places, and could not make up his mind.

Back from Taihang, on another journey westwards back to the City.

Opposite the Central Market, the bus stopped to allow a five-year-old Chinese child to be put on board. The driver overlooked the man about to follow it in. The bus began to move, and the amah, who had already one foot on the running board, had to be hauled up by fellow passengers.

This proved too much for a choleric Chinese gentleman in a long coat. He turned on the conductor, and the air on this peaceful Sunday afternoon resounded with maledictions.

Other passengers glared at the conductor, and he became the most unpopular person on the bus. He, in the pride of a new uniform and cap, was apt to focus his attention on only one of the two exits—the front.

At the stop opposite the Man On Insurance Co. offices, people were boarding at both ends. By giving his attention solely to the front end, the conductor completely forgot the other. The result was that the bus had to be again abruptly stopped, and that only after an irate passenger in danger of being separated from his friends, had yelled out a wrathful warning.

And so it continued, as one supposes it will continue until the new concern has settled down to the change. Yours etc. USER.

CHARGE AGAINST CONDUCTORALLEGED MISAPPROPRIATION
OF 40 CENTS

Charged with embezzling 40 cents from the Peak Tramways, Pang Chee-on, 27, employed as a conductor, appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning. Mr. D. G. Scott, Superintendent, appeared as the complainant.

For the prosecution, Mr. H. J. Armstrong said he understood unofficially that the defendant was being represented but there appeared to be nobody in Court on his behalf. The defendant denied the charge.

Hearing was fixed for to-morrow, bail being granted in the sum of $100.

One person was killed and 47 injured, some seriously, when a motor-bus conveying the members of a Nationalist youth organisation fell into a ravine while crossing a bridge near Ohlau, Silesia. The cause of the accident is not yet known.

Every day the figures are "improving." There exists a plant to-day employing only 238 men, which turns out 10,000 motor car chassis per day or, approximately 50 motor chassis per man each day.

This is by no means the end of the story. A razor blade has been invented which has been withheld from the market, because it will last lifetime. Manufacturers of razor blades and the workmen must be shivering in their shoes.

In some industries to-day, one man with the aid of machinery is doing the work which required 100 men so recently as the end of the War.

Efficiency systems and machines are dispensing with men in accounting houses and banks. Quite recently, sixteen policemen were dispensed with in Piccadilly Circus by automatic signals.

Machines supervise machines, and science has advanced to such a stage that it is possible, at a distance, to wave of the hand to stop or start machinery. All this is only an indication of what is to come. What will happen when the atom and spectrum is more thoroughly understood?

At the present time we have no doubt arrived at a peculiar stage. Plot the figures of production and labour, and the results say that the more houses, blankets, shoes, motor cars and general goods we produce, the less labour is required.

We are faced with a set of circumstances, unique in the history of Man. In the time there is a wonderful opportunity of benefit, or of catastrophe. Which? We have to decide. There is no escape!

FEATURES OF LEAGUE BOWLS

NO CHANGE IN LEADERSHIP

CRAIGENGOWER'S BOLD BID

ANOTHER DOUBLE ON SATURDAY

With the exception of Craigengower, who, through their success drew on level terms with the Kowloon Bowling Green in the Second Division, positions and records of the three leading teams in each of the divisions in the Lawn Bowls League remain unaltered as a result of Saturday's matches.

The Bowling Green seniors managed to defeat the Kowloon Dockers by the skin of their teeth and the Recreationists made a victory over Civil Service.

Thanks largely to Omar's rink, Craigengower beat the K.C.C. The Police recovered lost form when they journeyed to Talkoo and came away with the spoils. This was an excellent achievement and was entirely due to W.E. Hollands and his men who finished six up on Chalmers' quartette.

The Police reserves had a very different experience. Entertaining the Civil Service, they made little fight against better bowlers and lost by 25 shots.

BELETED RECOVERY.

But the biggest surprise of the day was the defeat of the K.C.C. by the Electric by 13 points. The margin would have been very much bigger but for a belated but never the less remarkable recovery on the part of J. P. Robinson and his colleagues. They were down 15-3 at one time and finally pulled up to lose by a couple of shots only. Playing on their own green for the first time this season, the Yacht Club celebrated the occasion by beating the Recreationists, but the Indians were unable to hold Craigengower, who won on two of the rinks.

TO-DAY'S BOWLS

PLAY IMPOSSIBLE

Torrential rain fell last night and seriously affected the chances of play in the Spoy Royal Cup and lawn bowls singles championship to-day.

Further rain this morning has made play impossible. Talkoo and H. K. Electric were to have met in the first round of the Spoy Royal Cup at the Craigengower, whilst the championship games to be decided were:

R. P. Phillips v T. Armstrong.

N. J. Bobbington v A. W. Grammitt.

A. Hyde-Lay v L. E. Lammer.

F. McCowan v G. E. Roylance.

TSUI NEARLY BEATS LEONARDO GAVIA

LEAGUE TENNIS.

NO PLAY POSSIBLE TO-DAY.

Prospects for the "A" Division league tennis programme to-day are hopeless and there is no chance of any of the games being played.

Overnight rain has put several courts under water. The following matches due for decision are certain to be postponed: C.R.C. "A" v S.C.A.A. "A", S.C.A.A. "B" v K.C.C. University, I.R.C. Recreationists v H.K.C.C. C.C.C. v C.R.C. "B".

A POLISHED DISPLAY

BERTIE GUEST IN FORM

HOLDS POLINTAN TO DRAW

TENNIS AT THE K.C.C.

(By "Veritas")

Weather and tennis were the chief topics of conversation at the Kowloon Cricket Club yesterday afternoon, when the Filipino exponents Leonardo Gavia and Leodegario Polintan turned out to take part in the second of a series of three exhibitions during their stay in Hongkong.

Polintan, from the verandah of the club house, watched the rain come down and did not feel at all kindly disposed to it. It meant goodbye to his tennis for the day. Others metaphorically rubbed their hands and talked suggestively and gleefully about lifted water restrictions. Which goes to show that even reactions to weather conditions can be relative.

But as Polintan pointed out, he and Gavia had not been very well treated by Jupiter Pluvius since their arrival in the Colony. He had given them sticky, slow courts on which to play and not content with that had caused one of their exhibition games to be abandoned.

But before this happened at 6 o'clock yesterday, the spectators who gathered inside the enclosed court at the K.C.C. enjoyed a very interesting display of tennis from which local players emerged with flying colours.

TSUI PLAYS WELL.

In the first place Tsui Wai-tai just showed how "form" can lead one astray in pronunciation. Last Thursday he was comparatively outplayed by Polintan. Yesterday he treated Gavia, Philippines champion, in something of the same manner.

He took the first set of a delightful encounter at 6-2, and actually led 5-3 in the second, but was overhauled and after the contest had been prolonged to the sixteenth game with the scores all-square, a draw was called to make way for the second singles.

But in the course of an hour Tsui gave an indication of how well he can play when the spirit moves him and he is prepared to devote his entire concentration on the game.

Gavia, of course was all at sea with the sticky court which kept the balls low and left the players sliding all over the place. But this does not detract from Tsui's own performance.

He was Gavia's superior stroke for stroke and deserved to win both sets. Tsui's great weapon yesterday was a sizzling backhand cross-court drive

FILIPINOS' FINAL APPEARANCE.

The two Filipino players will make their final public appearance on local courts on Wednesday, when they will take part in exhibitions at the Chinese Recreation Club.

At the moment the players to oppose them have not been revealed. From Hongkong the visitors go up to Shanghai, where they will stay eleven days, and from thence to Japan, where they will remain for a further eleven days before returning direct to Manila.

which left Gavia hopping on one foot watching it whizz past him as he went up to the net.

BETTER CONTROL.

The Chinese also had better control over his shots and mixed them with the cunning and ability of a seasoned player. When it came to spin strokes, drop shots etc., Tsui held his own, and although he did not occupy quite so much of the net as Gavia, when Tsui went up he usually pulled out a winning volley.

It was his best display since the Interport last November, and it was not, perhaps, pure coincidence that both were given at the Kowloon Cricket Club.

GAVIA HANDICAPPED.

Gavia was a triler right through, but he just could not overcome the difficulties of the court. Denied the opportunity of consistent driving, he endeavoured to bring into play chop and slice strokes, but he is not yet master of himself in this department and consequently made many errors.

His net attack also suffered, and he more than once netted easy

HOW THE SCORES WENT.

FIRST SINGLES.

L. Gavia and Tsui Wai-tai drew. Tsui won the first set at 6-2 and the second stood at all when the game was stopped.

SECOND SINGLES.

L. Polintan drew with A. E. P. Guest. Polintan won the first set at 6-4 and lost the second 6-2.

"kills." Gavia is a beautiful stylist and on a fast court would undoubtedly prove too good for Hongkong's leading lights.

K.C.C. members were highly delighted with Bertie Guest's performance against Polintan. Guest should have won the first set, for he was leading 4-2, but allowed Polintan to recover. However, the Kowloon player made no mistake about the second and captured it at 6-2.

GUEST'S STEADINESS.

Guest, who is reputed for his steadiness on the court, started rather nervously, but once he had settled down, always had a stroke to counter Polintan's rather impetuous attack and by his persistency wore the visitor down until he could do nothing right.

Polintan made the mistake of trying to drive Guest off the court. The K.C.C. exponent replied by dropping them short and forcing Polintan into errors. When it came to a question of tactics Guest won hands down, which was rather surprising.

Polintan was for ever endeavouring to force the pace, and so intent did he become on the task that he also became indiscreet. He rushed the net on the slightest provocation and afforded Guest easy chances of passing him, which the local player quickly seized.

For his part, Guest was chiefly content to hug the baseline, this being his customary method, but when he did go up for a volley he often succeeded.

He was a little erratic overhead, although the last shot which gave him the second set was a perfect kill.

Just as the crowd were getting worked up to a state of pleasurable anticipation of a first-class doubles game between the visitors and Finch and H. D. Rumjahn, a thunderstorm broke, which wrote finis to the day's play. It was an unhappy ending to an enjoyable afternoon.

POPULAR SWIMMING EVENTS

ROZA PEREIRA AGAIN

SCHREUDER WINS A GREAT RACE

Both the Y.M.C.A. and V.R.C. swimming galas, which formed the chief attraction of the week-end for aquatic fans were big successes on Saturday night.

L. Roza Pereira touched some of his best form to win the 100 yards in 60 3/5 secs, only two-fifths outside of the record, and subsequently he carried off the diving competition and lead a team to victory in the team race.

E. Roza, Colony's champion diver was unable to compete, but his brother offered Roza Pereira stout opposition and was placed an honourable second.

Roza Pereira was given a great challenge by W. Lawrence and L. Roza in the 100 yards race, and won by inches only with his contestants dead-heating for second place.

BREAST STROKE DUEL.

A terrific duel between W. Schreuder and G. Fowler in the 100 yards breast stroke was a feature of the programme at the Y.M.C.A., when the Association held its second gala of the season. Schreuder won by the barest margin and Fowler put up one of his greatest displays to date.

Equally exciting was the team race which found E. Ralston and his colleagues successful. Less than a yard, however, separated the winner and A.G. Donn, and the positions remained the same practically throughout the race.

Miss J. Shoosmith, taking advantage of the absence of Mrs. Schreuder and Mrs. McMahon, won the ladies race in good style, whilst G. Chadderton just pipped R. Goldman in the 25 yards under water event after a keen duel.

SECRETS OF THE WAR

REVELATIONS BY A REVIEW

INSTRUCTIONS TO CENSORS

Paris. Secrets of the day in which the French and German censorships worked during the Great War are revealed by "Vu," the French weekly review.

Independent inquiries made by Reuters' Paris Correspondent in authoritative quarters confirm the accuracy of the remarkable statements now published for the first time.

Here are extracts from instructions given to German censors, according to "Vu."

The Kaiser: Watch especially all speeches, orders, telegrams, or other personal manifestations of His Majesty. They must be reviewed before publication, even if the original text is authentic.

The Crown Prince: Avoid any allusion to His Highness other than in his capacity as Army Commander.

Soldiers: Avoid the expression "human material."

September 22, 1914: The situation on the Western Front is good. Let through no allusion to a retreat due to enemy success. Every movement of German troops is of a strategic nature, is unaffected by enemy movements, and represents preparations for a new success.

NOT TOO MUCH GLORY.

December 23, 1915: Too much glory should not be given to the Turkish successes in Gallipoli. The Turk is a good soldier, but the major part of our success is due to German officers, German munitions, etc.

April 18, 1916: Reuters is trying in an obvious manner to suggest a rupture between ourselves and the United States in the near future. Do not allow the German Press to fall into this ridiculous trap. The United States appreciate the clear and firm words of our diplomatic notes. There is no reason to suppose that the United States would dream of rupture. Give the Press cuttings from American newspapers which contradict Reuters.

May 24, 1918: The Bolsheviks must not be referred to with contempt. They are little affected by Entente influences. They show anxiety to keep their word. We have recognised their government and do not wish to cause them difficulties.

KAISER'S ABDICATION.

October 9, 1918: All allusions to the Emperor's plans for abdication are forbidden. No news on this subject is allowed at all.

The rules for French censors were codified in a lengthy secret report called "Circular 1000." Here are hitherto unpublished extracts quoted by "Vu."

African Troops: Do not give more than just praise to native troops. Their value must not be exalted at the expense of other troops. (November 25, 1914)

Poison Gas and Liquid Flame Throwers: All publication of their use is forbidden (August 19, 1915).

Publications in Favour of Peace: These publications, forbidden in principle, can be authorised when they specially advocate a victorious peace, based on justice and the triumph of right (February 1, 1915).

Publicity should not be given to special circumstances which may have led to a momentary and local rapprochement between enemies, as well as to acts of generosity of Germans towards the French (which are, moreover, extremely rare).—Reuters.

DYNAMITE IN A BLAZING HOUSE

ATTEMPT TO BLOW UP VILLAGE

Lisbon. Police are investigating what is believed to have been an attempt to blow up a whole village with dynamite.

A thousand pounds of dynamite arrived from Lisbon at the village of Vale—Major, and was stored in a house to await its use for blasting work on a new road.

Shortly afterwards the improvised powder magazine was seen to be on fire but what might have been a terrible catastrophe was averted in the nick of time.

Taking their lives in their hands, firemen courageously entered the blazing house and transferred the dynamite to a safe distance.

Meanwhile, a man is under arrest and is said to have confessed to firing the building from motives of vengeance against the owner.—Reuters.

Largest Racecourse Stand in World

NOW AT KEMPTON PARK

London.

The largest racecourse stand in the world has risen in eight months from the ashes of the Kempton Park member's stand which was destroyed by fire last year. It holds more than 3,000 people, and is 240 feet long and 100 feet deep.

One section of the new building contains three special boxes, one for Lord Derby, one for the stewards of the meeting and a suite for the King. The Royal suite is like a magnificent self-contained flat. It has dining-rooms, drawing-rooms, and a kitchen. There is a private entrance leading direct to the suite from the road.

Two-thirds of the stand are for members of the Kempton Park Club, the remaining portion being for the general public who patronise Tattersall's ring.—Reuters.

MUMMIES NOT WANTED

PUBLIC CHANGED ITS MIND

London.

Fifty years ago the cry of almost every visitor who came into the British Museum was "Show us the way to the mummies."

To satisfy the public's passionate interest in Egyptology, the museum acquired and was presented with mummies on a wholesale scale. They were lined up in the corridors and crowded into a number of rooms.

Now the visitors' interest in them having worn off, the museum would like to get rid of about half their supply. It is proposed to leave a few of them on view and put the rest in two locked rooms, available to students who insisted on studying large quantities.

The First Commissioner of Works recently startled London when he said that the girders supporting the floors of the British Museum were "no longer to be trusted." But the officials of the building have replied that there were always serious flaws in the girders—due to faulty casting. They are just as bad to-day as they were 110 years ago when the building was erected—but no worse.—Reuters.

LARGE NOSES AND SMALL JAWS

CHARACTERISTICS OF AUSTRALIANS

Melbourne.

Australians possess two notable characteristics; they have large noses and small jaws.

A sculptor, Mr. Paul Montford, has discovered these facts about Australians after many years of study and modelling.

To make Australian features more regular he suggests that there should be a greater infusion of English blood.

Mr. Montford attributes the enlarged noses to nature's adjustment to a hot, dry, and sultry climate. Men breathe faster and deeper in hot Australia, he believes, and as a result their noses develop.

He does not know any reason for the small jaws.—Reuters.

LENGTH OF THE THAMES

REPORTED TO BE 137 MILES

London.

The length of the Thames is given as 137 miles in a report just issued by members of the Thames Conservancy.

If all the windings of the Thames are measured, according to the distance from Thames Head Bridge to the Nore is 200 miles. And if all the tributaries be included, the river has a total mileage of 568.

The streams which comprise the main river are the rivers Mole, Embur, Loddon, Thame, Cherwell, Evenlode, Windrush, Churn, Ray, and Kennet.—Reuters.

IMPROVING THE RAILWAYS

NEW DEVICES EACH MONTH

THE LATEST

London.

Month by month new and wonderful devices are brought into use to save time and work on the railways.

To-day the boilers of engines clean themselves out automatically and trains on the railway lines themselves control colour light signals. There are portable machines which fasten tight the bolts on sleepers, and electric welding apparatus which will build up new steel on rails worn at the points where they cross, without it being necessary to move them.

One man in a signal-box working on the new electric system, can do, with ease, work which needed something like ten men under the old system.

There is a machine in use which whirls great engine driving wheels round at a speed equivalent to 70 miles an hour, and so tests their balance before they are fitted into the engines. There are appliances which, when trucks are being made, can make forty-eight holes, and screw home 48 bolts in a few seconds.

A fireman in the locomotive sheds has only to press a button—and huge coal bunkers made of concrete mix, weigh up and supply tons of coal to the engines.

One of the latest "gadgets" to be tried out on the railways is a device to be fitted to express trains. By means of the photo-electric cell this device will switch all the electric lights in the train on when a tunnel is entered, and will switch them off again when the train re-emerges into daylight.—Reuters.

ENGINEERING WOMEN

RUN WORKS AT KENSINGTON

London.

The only engineering works in the world run entirely by women is at Kensington. Every employee, from proprietor to office girl, is a woman and much of the work is manufacturing the engineering inventions of women.

Girls clamour with long shafting there, armed with grane guns, while others pry deep into the delicate works of big machines.

The business was started by a woman and at no time in its history has any man had a hand in it. Its founder, manager, organiser, and inventor of some of its products is Miss A. Ashberry.

Miss Ashberry now employs 20 girls as engineers but at first she had so many rebuffs from men that the enterprise was almost killed. Some of the girls in her plant left offices and shops to learn engineering. One was a speedway rider and another a road scout.

Not long ago Miss Ashberry was approached by the British Broadcasting Company to make a special gramophone pick-up. She was given the work because the B.B.C. thought a woman would be the best to handle it as the details were a confidential secret.

The factory makes delicate aeroplane parts for many of the great air companies, turned parts for ships, wireless sets, razor blades, motor-car clutches, hosiery machines, baconcutting machines, and a patent fly-trap invented by a woman.—Reuters.

RIOT AT FASHION PARADE

WEDDING "STUNT" WHICH FAILED

London, Ontario.

Because a wedding did not take place as scheduled at a fashion review, women patrons created such a disturbance that police had to be rushed to the scene and were obliged to arrest a man in order to restore peace.

The dress show was held at a local hotel, and one of the attractions advertised was a wedding ceremony.

Women turned up in their hundreds and everything was going splendidly when—

The bride and bridegroom arrived and blushing announced that the marriage knot had been tied elsewhere.

The patrons of the show were furious. There were loud cries of "Fraud!" "Hoax!"—mingled with more colourful ejaculations. Chaos broke loose. Amid screams of "Give us our money back!"

A general melee ensued and the exhibits were in danger of destruction.

The police arrived at the double; but peace was only assured.

New Street Lighting Systems

PARIS INVENTION

Paris.

Paris engineers have successfully experimented with an invention which they claim will revolutionise the street lighting systems of the world's capital cities.

This is a photo-electric 'eye' which, exposed to the daylight, automatically switches on the electric current when the daylight reaches a given degree of weakness, and increases the strength of the current in direct ratio to the gathering darkness, so that full brilliance is achieved when night has completely fallen. With the first streaks of dawn the process is reversed.

"Our invention," an official said, "will save thousands of pounds on the present wasteful system installed in all capital cities, whereby blocks of street lamps are wired to clocks which switch the lights on at a regulated hour. An enormous amount of wiring, and a large number of clocks are required for this, and a large margin of error is inevitable. Another advantage is that the group of weather watchers scattered about any great city who have to turn on the lights in the event of fog or bad weather will be replaced by the automatic photo-electric 'eye.'—Reuters.

TO SAVE U.S.

2,000 PLANS SUBMITTED

"SOME ARE PRETTY WILD"

Washington, D.C.

More than two thousand plans have poured in upon Miss Frances Perkins, U.S. Secretary of Labour and first American Woman Cabinet Minister, from as many citizens anxious to help the nation since she took office.

Probably every person in official life in Washington has had an avalanche of such plans over a period of several depression years, but it remained for the statistical-minded Miss Perkins to assemble all that arrived in a single bookcase and classify its contents.

"The kind of thinking that is going on in America to-day is very interesting," she said of this type of arriving mail-matter.

"Some are pretty wild, but I find grains of truth in them."

Her own view on public works was that $2,000,000,000 or $3,000,000,000 worth of projects could be put under way in four or five months in Federal, State and county projects, not "monumental" works, but of a nature to raise the American standard of living, by means of more roads, sewerage systems, bathrooms, low cost-houses, and telephone and light poles leading to farm dwellings.—Reuters.

Vienna.

Austria, according to the official Bureau of Statistics, has only two persons with an annual income of one million schillings (about $30,000) or over.

Only 300 taxpayers, out of a population of 6,500,000, have an income larger than $4,000 a year. There are 9,000 who annually receive an income of from $700 to $2,000.

The average yearly income of taxpayers is $90, and only one-third of the population pay an income-tax.—Reuters.

ENGLISH WOMEN WIN AT BRIDGE

Ireland Beaten In First International

London.

England defeated Ireland by more than 3,000 points in the all-women's contract bridge international match held in London recently.

It was the first international bridge contest in which Irish women have played.

The score, after two days' play, was England 29,370, and Ireland 26,310.—Reuters.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Here is another article in which I would like you to study and analyze the hand before your opening lead. This is an actual hand which came up in tournament play.

The Bidding.

South, the dealer, opened the bidding with one diamond and West made a negative double. North bid two diamonds.

I do not particularly like this bid. If West had passed, the two diamond bid would be satisfactory, but after West's double this two diamond bid is constructive, and outside of trump support the hand does not have many possibilities.

East then bid three clubs. This is highly constructive. Remember that East's partner has doubled. North has made a bid, and for East to put in a bid now show a pretty good hand.

Generally a negative double asks partner to bid hearts or spades, but due to East's distribution, he felt it better to show his club as undoubtedly his partner was going to show hearts or spades on the next round and he could then support it for a possible slam.

South passed and West bid three hearts. East can now show heart support and a void in diamonds by making a bid of four diamonds.

This is all the information that West needs and he goes to six hearts.

The Play.

It is North's opening lead. The old auction book would say "lead the top of your partner's suit" and if you did that with this hand

♠ 7-6-5		♠ 10-8-
♥ 9-4-2		♥ 4-3
♦ 10-9-3-2		♦ 7-6-3
♣ 9-3		♣ None
♠ A-Q-2	NORTH	♠ A-Q-2
♥ A-K-Q	EAST	♥ A-K-Q
♦ 10-8-5	DEALER	♦ 10-8-5
♣ 8-4	SOUTH	♣ 8-4
♣ 7-4		♣ 7-4
♠ K-J-9		♠ K-J-9
♥ None		♥ None
♦ A-K-Q-7-6-5		♦ A-K-Q-7-6-5
♣ K-J-8-5		♣ K-J-8-5

the declarer could easily make his contract. Why not analyze the hand in the following manner?

You cannot lead hearts—that is trump, and to lead trump is allowing the declarer to bid six and call his lead. You cannot lead diamonds because East has definitely showed that he is void in diamonds with his cue bid in diamonds.

That suits it down to a club or a spade lead. Spades is the only unbid suit and you can rest assured that the declarer, before bidding for his slam, took into consideration the fact that his opponent was most likely to open the only unbid suit—therefore I would definitely say that the declarer is prepared for a spade opening.

However, there is a possibility that South may have a spade trick, but that is not going to be enough to defeat the small slam contract.

East has shown clubs, therefore your best attack is to lead through dummy's strength, hoping to set up a club for your partner and then, if he can get in with a spade, he can cash the club trick. As you see, the nine of clubs is the only opening that will defeat the contract.

The declarer is now bound to lose a club and a spade. If a spade were opened the declarer could set up a long spade in dummy on which to discard the losing club.

You will find the game much more interesting if you will analyze a hand thoroughly before making opening lead.

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Howard Hughes has delivered another great contribution to the screen in his United Artists Picture "Scarface", showing at the King's Theatre. It is one of the finest examples of picture making seen here. From the standpoint of sheer melodrama, it is unsurpassed. It moves at a tremendous pace, and it builds logically and convincingly to a startling climax without a single false note to mar the tempo and finesse of its deftly constructed and brilliantly photographed plot. "Scarface" is no pink-toe affair, as can well be imagined, coming from Howard Hughes, famed for his film achievements.

It is a cold, vivid and sensational treatment of a subject which has become one of America's major social problems. "Scarface" is a credit to the motion-picture industry, for its portrayal of a criminal, and a great personal triumph for its courageous young producer.

"Scarface" will thrill you, will entertain you, will enlighten you, and it will amuse you with its human interest and comedy, which is part and parcel of any great melodrama of real life. Paul Muni, who plays the gang leader, gives a great screen characterization. A Broadway stage star, renowned for his artistic impersonations, he is seen in this picture. His portrayal of Tony Camonte assures him of definite star ranking.

Ann Dvorak, the new Howard Hughes discovery, playing her first film role, is a sensation, and she, too, gives promise of becoming a star of first magnitude.

"The Broken Wing"

An aeroplane, travelling at an estimated speed of eighty miles an hour, was crashed into the hacienda on the Paramount ranch, forty miles from Hollywood, for a scene in "The Broken Wing," in which Lupa Volez, Leo Carillo and Melvyn Douglas are featured and which commences on Thursday at the Queen's Theatre.

Recognized as one of the leading camera pilots in Hollywood, Captain E. H. Robinson was assigned to handle the technical details for "The Broken Wing." It has been only a few air scenes, but since they include the crash of a plane into the side of a house, they had to be perfectly done. The speed and weight of the plane was calculated by Capt. Robinson so that cameramen would not be endangered. One side of the hacienda was demolished as the plane crashed into the living room, stopping within two feet of where Captain Robinson had figured it would.

"Symphony of Six Million"

Another of Fannie Hurst's, frequent but always outstanding film dramatizations of understandable men and women opened at the Central Theatre on Saturday with "Symphony of Six Million," co-starring Ricardo Cortez and Irene Dunne.

The film is another "Humoresque" in the classical romanticism and poignancy of its subject matter and in the sheer dramatic force of its characterizations.

Like most of the stories by this eminent American authoress, the locale is New York's vibrant East Side which is represented in the film truthfully as a throbbing symbol of interracial racial culture.

The story is the saga of an East Side doctor, a man of extreme idealism, who consecrates his life and his great skill in the treatment of the poor and helpless. His family, believing that exploitation of his skill will result in their financial betterment, influences him to move to the exclusive Park Avenue section of the city. There his talents are rewarded by the wealthy, but in the meantime he has lost contact with his early environment and the idealism that had once made him devote his life to the poor.

His is awakened to his former sense of duty to the poor when he performs an unsuccessful operation upon his father and when Jessica (Irene Dunne) herself in danger of death, shames him into a new sense of duty.

"The Greek Had A Word For Them" All three of the blonde sirens in "The Greek Had A Word For Them", which comes to the King's Theatre on Thursday tell their gentlemen friends that they are ex-Follies girls. It's the truth for Ina Claire, the brilliant comedienne who plays the girl with the undressing complex in this version of the hilarious stage play by Zoe Akins.

Ina Claire was headliner in the Ziegfeld Follies before the dramatic stage or pictures either had even heard of her. She had been a

A NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH.

FOUNDATION STONE TO BE LAID

The foundation stone of the new Church of St. Anthony, on a site prepared from the slope below Pokfulam Road, at West Point, will be laid and blessed by Bishop Valtorta to-morrow afternoon.

The important character of the event, marking the commencement of a $100,000 ecclesiastical edifice in an important parish, will be fittingly celebrated. In addition to Solemn High Mass at 7 a.m., the religious rites will include Solemn Vespers at 4.45 p.m., followed by a sermon and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

A Procession in which almost all the Catholic clergy of the Colony will participate, will then proceed to the site of the new Church, and the laying and blessing of the foundation stone will follow shortly afterwards.

The Salesian Society, whose St. Lewis Industrial School adjoins the site, has arranged for the boys of that institution and of the Walls' Recreation Club to give a gymnastic performance after the religious ceremony, to be assisted by the Bands of the Society's institutions from both Hongkong and Macao.

During this entertainment light refreshments will be available.

The occasion will also be marked by small souvenirs, which, with tickets, have been sent out to various "co-operators" and friends of the Salesian Society, who will have charge of the new Church when it is completed. These tickets are available at the nominal cost of 25 cents each. The souvenirs are available at the function to-morrow and for the two or three days following.

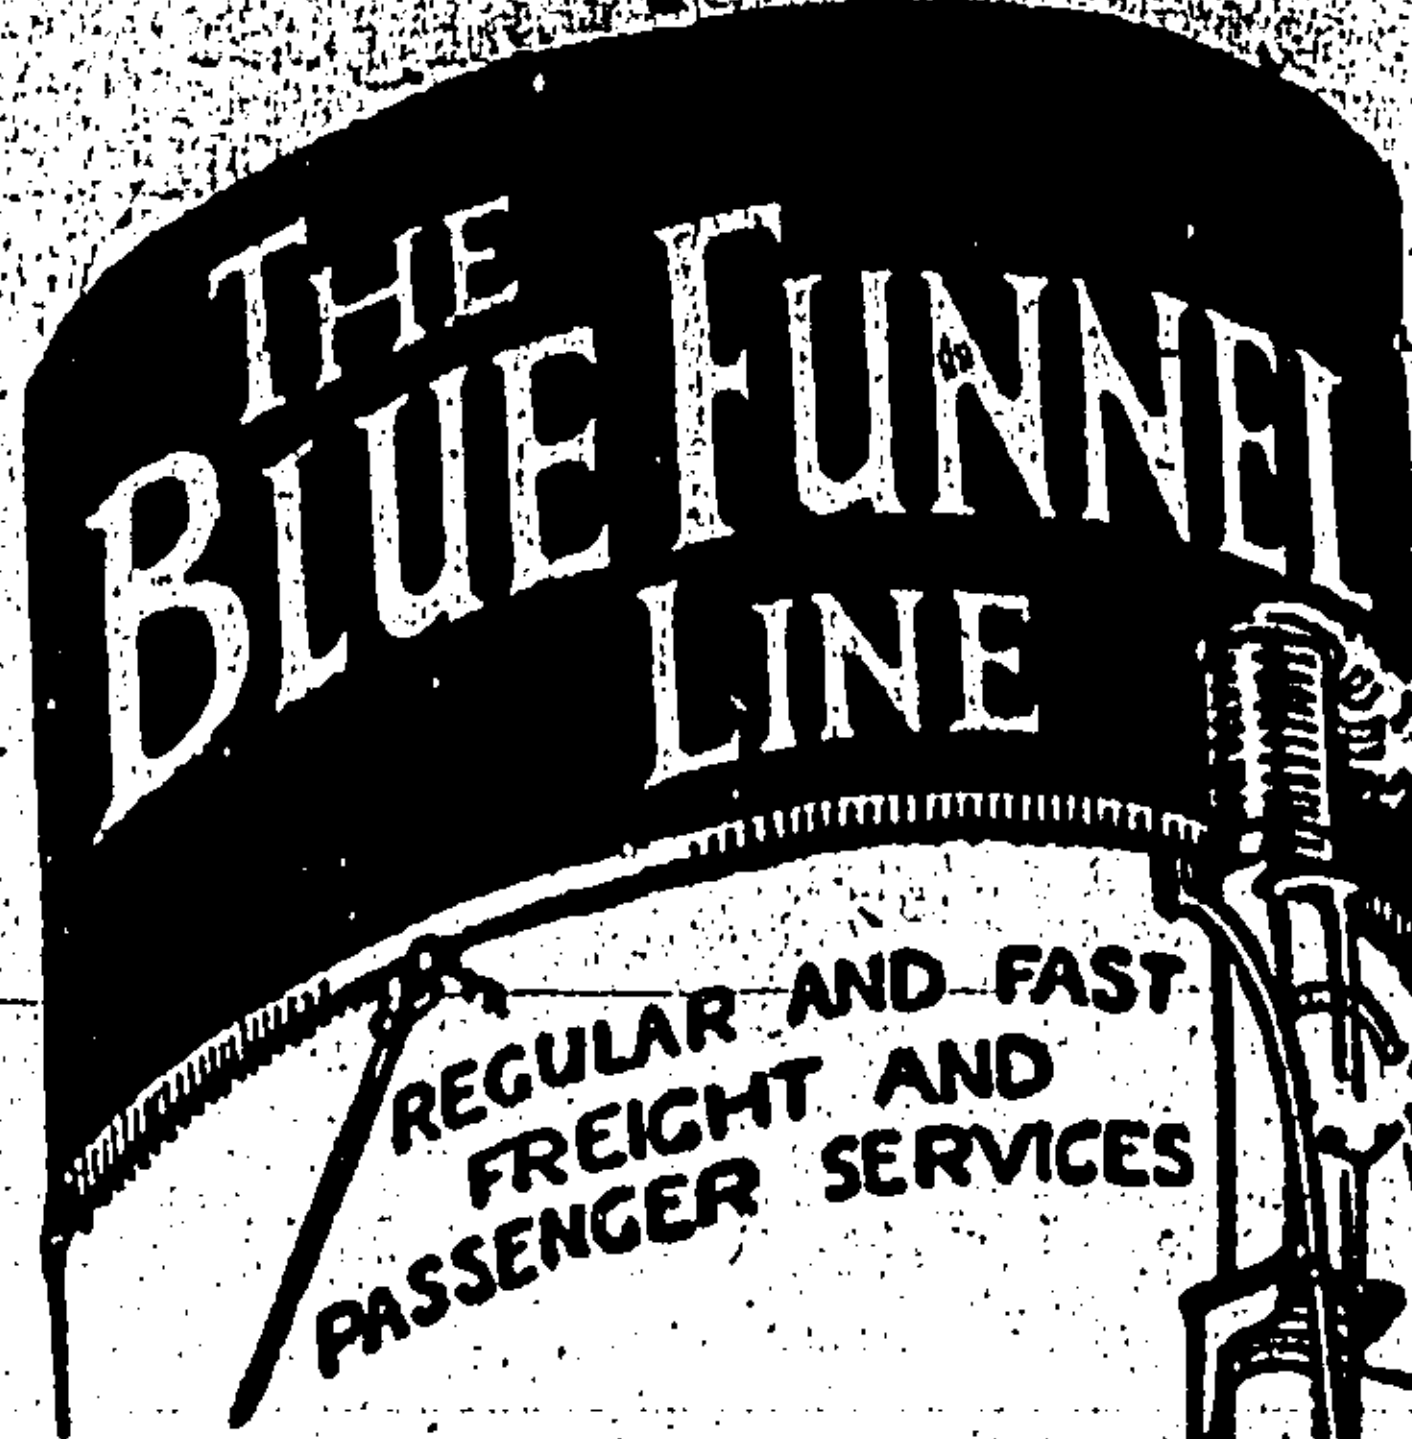

By the distribution of these souvenirs, the Committee in charge of the undertaking has found a happy way of bringing to the "widest possible" attention a deserving project, aiming not only at the construction of the Church itself, but also at social welfare work centred in the Auditorium and Gymnasium that will be located below the Church. A cordial invitation is extended by the Committee to all friends and supporters. Arrangements have been made with the Bus Company for the conveyance of visitors to the spot by both the Nos. 3 and 4 Routes.

feature of musical shows like "The Quaker Girl," and "The Belle of Bond Street" previous to the Follies. And it was her singing of a song about a Belasco play in the Follies which moved the late great David Belasco to take her in hand and put her on the legitimate stage as the latest of his long series of discoveries. She had her greatest stage success, however, in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyne."

Aiding and abetting Ina Claire in her pursuit of millionaires in "The Greeks Had A Word For Them" are Joan Blondell and Madge Evans. Lowell Sherman directed the picture and acted in it as well, and Sidney Howard adapted it to the screen from Zoe Akins' original Broadway hit.

BRONZE BUST DONATED BY CHINESE FRIENDS

An interesting ceremony, in connexion with the unveiling of a bronze bust of the late Mr. Lau Chu-pak, the first Chairman of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce and former member of the Hongkong Legislative Council, took place at the Chinese Chamber of Commerce on Saturday afternoon. The present Chairman, Mr. Wong Kwong-tin, performed the ceremony in the presence of many members, including the Hon. Sir Shou-son Chow, the Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall, the Hon. Mr. T. N. Chau, Mr. Lau Tak-po (son of Mr. Lau Chu-pak), and other members of the family.

The bronze bust, a striking resemblance to the late Mr. Lau, was a work of art executed by the well known firm of Raoul Bigazzi, of Florence, Italy. The bust rests on a white marble pedestal about five feet high, which will be displayed permanently in the hall of the Chamber. Over one hundred members of the Chamber were among the donors of the bust.

Distinguished Career.

The late Mr. Lau Chu-pak's distinguished career, in which for over forty years he closely associated himself with public works in Hongkong, was referred to by Mr. Wong Kwong-tin.

He recalled that Mr. Lau Chu-pak was associated with no fewer than 25 enterprises and commercial firms during his life, and participated in the work of 19 public institutions, including his work as founder and first chairman of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, chairman of the Tung Wah Hospital, unofficial Chinese member of the Legislative Council, the honorary adviser of the Kwongtung Government, member of the Sanitary Board, District Watchmen's Committee, Po Leung-kuk, and numerous other minor boards and institutions of an official or public nature. The Chairman concluded with references to Mr. Lau Chu-pak's keenness in the promotion of education, and the various honours given to him by the British and Chinese Governments towards the end of his energetic and successful career.

After this, Mr. M. F. Key also spoke a few words on behalf of the Hongkong General Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Lau Tak-po thanked the Chairman and all members of the Chamber for their most generous means of honouring his late father.

ASSAULTING A MUI TSAI

CONCUBINE BOUND OVER

Alleged to be hot-tempered and very unpopular with the household, So King Sau, concubine, of 4, Circular Path, appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones in Central Police Court this morning, charged with assaulting a registered mui-tai, aged 16. Defendant pleaded guilty and was bound over in a bond of $100 to keep the peace for a year.

Sub-Inpector H. W. Fraser, of the S.C.A., said the case was the result of a report made by the Anti-Mui T'ai Society on June 8 that a girl was being ill-treated. She was a registered mui-tai employed by the fat wife and the defendant was the second concubine. She had been ordered to wash clothes by the fat wife, and the defendant issued a further order. The girl became cheeky, and defendant slapped her face. Defendant was then alleged to have picked up a piece of firewood and struck the girl first over the right eye and then over the left. The girl had been in the Po Leung Kuk since Saturday.

Defendant claimed the mui t'ai rendered service to every member of the family.

S. I. Fraser—The girl will go back to the house. She is exceptionally well cared for by the fat wife.

"I DISBELIEVE DEFENDANT"

PUISNE JUDGE'S DECISION

"I disbelieve defendant entirely," said Mr. Justice Lindsell at the Supreme Court this morning when he gave judgment in the sum of $140 and costs to plaintiff in a rent dispute action.

The plaintiffs in the case were Ho-Hong-po and Pun-Shi, both of 118, Wellington Street, represented by Mr. J. B. Prentiss, of Messrs. Hastings and Co., and the defendants the Kwong Kee firm now trading as the Lee Kwong Kee firm, of 43a, Queen's Road East, represented by Mr. F.C.E. Rendall, of Messrs. Russ and Co.

The claim was for rent due on 41, Queen's Road East, for the first moon of the current Chinese year and one moon's rent in lieu of notice to quit.
